LETTERS SHOW GIRL LOVED MAN WHO SHOT HER

HURRY MELLEN TO STAND

Commissioner Charles A. Prouty declared today at the hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Federal building that what the commission wants to know is what President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven road did with the $134,000 which is credited to him on the New Haven books.

"What this commission wants to know," said Chairman Prouty to Charles F. Choate, personal counsel for Mr. Mellen, "is what became of this money. What did Mr. Mellen do with it after the directors voted it to his credit?"

Deny Profit to Mellen.

This direct announcement from the commissioner led to the New Haven's counsel hastening their preparations for the appearance of President Mellen on the witness stand at the hearing tomorrow. The $134,000 referred to by the commissioner is the sum of $102,000 and $32,000 which was declared a week ago to represent Mr. Mellen's "personal profits" on certain transactions. The New Haven contends that Mr. Mellen did not make any profits, and that the money was returned to the railroad's treasury. This led to Commissioner Prouty's declaration that he is anxious to find out what became of this money.

Mr. McDen's personal counsel, Attorney Charles F. Choate, Jr., said at the noon adjournment today:

"Every Cent Accounted For."

"There are certain matters which Mr. Mellen only can explain relative to these note transactions. Today's cross-examination of Accountant Brown has shown that every penny of those Mellen notes, or the equivalent in securities and full interest came back to the treasury of the New Haven Railroad, but there are two features which I cannot explain to Chairman Prouty.

These relate to the difference in the purchase and sale prices of the New Haven stock, which figured in the Mellen note transactions. I feel that I have shown that Mr. Mellen did not make a dollar of profit or that the New Haven Company did not lose so much as a penny in the various stock transactions, but it does not appear clear what became of two sums which special committees of the directors voted to credit to Mr. Mellen.

Therefore I shall have President Mellen come in tomorrow morning and give his explanation which I feel confident will be easy for him.

Is Anxious to Testify.

Mr. Mellen, according to semi-official statements issued daily by the Boston News Bureau, is only too anxious to take oath and tell his side of the story. He feels that the grave charges buried at the New Haven and its directorate during the sessions of the present inquiry have created a bar of public opinion and that it is his duty to defend his railroad system and his associates.

Chairman Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission scored the New Haven's system of bookkeeping declaring it was faulty and did not represent the actual value of assets of the company.

The criticism was made in connection with the cross-examination of Auditor David E. Brown by Attorney Charles F. Choate, president Mellen's personal counsel.

It is expected that when President Mellen takes the stand Friday investigation will be made of the millions of dollars of non-competitive contracts "Diamond Jim" Brady had with President Mellen to supply the New Haven with cars and equipment.

Brady May Take Stand.

Mr. Brady is staying at the Hotel Touraine and may himself be called to the witness stand to tell how he secured these contracts from his intimate friend, Mr. Mellen, whom he has wined and dined at feasts fit for a king.

Chairman Prouty said: "The criticism

"L" Passengers Voting Today on Subway Problem

How did you vote today—for Park street or for Postoffice square?

Sounds foolish, but that's the right way to ask about the unique straw vote or referendum begun today by the Boston Elevated to find out from the folks who ride on the cars whether they would prefer to have the new Boylston street subway end at Park street or at Postoffice square.

Conductors on in-bound cars today hand this ballot to passengers:

Hand one of these to collector when leaving the car in the subway:

I prefer a Subway to Park Street.	I prefer a Subway to Postoffice Sq.

PATERSON MILL WORKERS PART WITH CHILDREN

PATERSON, N. J., May 1.—Pitiful scenes were enacted here today when the mill strikers parted with their children, who were taken to New York and placed with strike sympathizers there. The strike has caused a depletion of the funds of practically every family whose members were employed at the mills and the taking of the children to New York was mostly for the purpose of insuring them food and proper shelter.

When the hour for parting came, and the children were being loaded into vans that transported them out of the city, mothers and fathers rushed forward, clasped their children in their arms, kissed them and cried over them.

BAD BOYS HOVE A CAT THROUGH PARTY WINDOW

GLOUCESTER, May 1.—Six boys were arraigned before Judge York in the Eastern District Court here today charged with having thrown a live cat through the dining room window of Mrs. Delaney's home on Maplewood avenue during the progress of a party last night and five were held in $500 for a continued hearing in the juvenile court next Tuesday.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, May 1.—President Wilson today sent the following nominations to the Senate:

Assistant comptroller of the treasury—Walter W. Warwick of Ohio.

Commissioner of corporations—Joseph K. Davies of Wisconsin.

Postmasters—Maine, Kittery Point, Frank T. Clarkson; Pittsfield, S. E. Frost. Massachusetts, Woods Hole, Benjamin R. Gifford; Kingston, William J. O'Brien. Rhode Island, East Greenwich, Thomas H. Galvin.

TONS OF LOBSTERS ON PROVINCE BOATS

Two ships from Nova Scotia ports arrived in Boston today with immense shipments of lobsters. The Halifax, from Halifax, brought 537 crates and the Boston, from Yarmouth, brought 1060 crates. As the crates contain about 150 pounds each the aggregate of both cargoes was nearly 250,000 pounds. Despite the immense shipments the buyers were eager for the lobsters and the prices that have prevailed for a week or more were not affected.

ARABIC, FOG BOUND, DUE HERE MONDAY

A wireless dispatch from the White Star liner Arabic, due here Saturday, was received today. It stated that the liner was delayed by fogs and is moving slowly. She will not reach Halifax before Saturday and will arrive at Boston some time Monday. The Arabic will disembark 500 cabin and 780 steerage passengers at Halifax and bring 100 cabin and 200 steerage passengers to Boston.

DR. J. R. TAYLOR IS FOUND GUILTY

Dr. James R. Taylor of Brookline, a nerve specialist with offices in the Back Bay, who testified in the Superior Court at Dedham that he couldnt live with his wife because she was away from home all the time, was found guilty of assault today. Mrs. Taylor said he pushed her off the veranda and injured her face and hands. Sentence was deferred.

DEMAND PACIFIC DEFENCE

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 1.—The advisability of strengthening the defenses of the Pacific coast were discussed here today while the Webb-Thompson anti-alien and bill awaited third reading and formal passage in the Senate.

Legislators were openly discussing the possibility of war with Japan, since it was ensured that the Legislature would pass the bill, which President Wilson has said was unfriendly to Japan.

Senator Thompson, whose name is attached to the anti-alien land bill, said today:

Would Strengthen Fleet.

"I favor strengthening the fleet in the Pacific for instant protection. I do not believe California should appeal to Congress, however, because the government at Washington knows the situation fully, and such action at this time would only serve to complicate international affairs, which are already strained."

Senator Curtain, Democrat, agreed with Senator Thompson, and added that he favored continued increased protection on the Pacific coast. Assemblyman Benedict, Republican, said:

"I favor a larger fleet in the Pacific, especially at this time." Assemblyman Griffin, Democrat:

"I favor memorialising Congress at once to give us more warships in the Pacific."

Senator Brown, Republican:

"I see no need of any quick action. My information is that Japan would not consider sending a single warship to our coast at this time."

Bryan Sees Jap Colonies.

Secretary Bryan was today taken for a spin in Governor Johnson's automobile to the towns of Florin and Walnut Grove, a dozen miles from the capital, where two typical colonies of Japanese farmers have been started. Governor Johnson and Assemblyman Bradford, who represents that district, accompanied him. They will point out the following concrete facts for his observation:

There are more than 5,000 Japanese subjects in Sacramento County, according to Assemblyman Bradford's computation from the 1910 census.

There are more than 1,500 Japanese in the Florin colony, where scores of big farms are owned and hundreds of acres are leased.

There are 42 Japanese children out of a total enrollment of 67 pupils in the Florin public schools.

In Walnut Grove, Isleton, and Sierra, neighboring towns in the same community, the number of Japanese children in the public schools' ranges from 46 to 50 per cent. of the total.

Governor Johnson said he was pleased that Secretary Bryan had accepted the invitation to see for himself "California's best argument for an anti-alien law."

DOCTOR WYNNE TAKEN TO JAIL ON PERJURY CHARGE

Dr. Richard Wynne of No. 30 Hancock street and Frederick Lamb, a music teacher with a studio at No. 12 Huntington avenue, were before United States Commissioner Hayes today, charged with perjury. The men are accused of giving false testimony in the suit of Nellie Guertin, a private detective of Boston, against the Mason-Seaman Taxi-Cab Company of New York. She charged injuries in a collision.

May 5 was fixed as the date for hearings in both cases. Bail for Dr. Wynne was fixed at $2,500 and for Lamb at $2,000. The men were unable to obtain bail and were taken to East Cambridge jail.

STICKS TO RANDALL FOR PRISON PLACE

Governor Foss today denied he intended to withdraw the name of Frank L. Randall of Minnesota for the State Prison Commission and substitute the name of Sheriff John Quinn, making former Mayor Daniel J. Whelton sheriff to succeed Quinn. The Executive Council has twice postponed action on Randall's nomination, on the ground that the Governor should not go outside of the State for a man for the prison commission.

ASSASSIN AND GIRL VICTIM

David L. Piscopo, Boston drug clerk, whose mad infatuation for Tina de Francisco of Revere, revealed in papers he left behind, led him to shoot her from ambush and then kill himself, today, and a snapshot of Miss de Francisco.

JOSHUA CRANE GETS $300,000 BY WIFE'S WILL

The will of Mrs. Ethel Hill Crane, of Westwood, wife of Joshua Crane, the former Harvard coach and well known polo player, was filed today in the Probate Court at Dedham. The will not only leaves half a million to the husband and the two Crane children, a boy and a girl, but makes several other interesting bequests, including a bequest of $1,000 to establish at Pocasset, on Buzzard's Bay, a vacation home for the benefit of the poor of St. John's Episcopal Church, Dedham.

Mrs. Crane died a month ago as a result of injuries she received in an automobile accident at Middleboro. To her husband is left outright $300,000. A trust fund of $200,000 is created for the children, her husband to receive the income until the youngest child reaches the age of twenty-one. On reaching that age each child is to receive $2000 for education or travel.

As each child reaches the age of twenty-five, each will receive $40,000. They will receive their entire share of the estate at thirty.

Another trust fund of $10,000 is created under the will from the income of which Rose Ann Kelley, the children's nurse, is to get $350 annually during her life, and the rector of St. John's Church, Dedham, is to get $100 annually for the maintenance of a bed at the Massachusetts General Hospital for the poor of the parish.

The sum of $150 each is left to the children of Mabel Hill Porter, Edith H. Hagney, Mary Crane McClellan and Walter Crane with a suggestion that the money be used to buy personal remembrances of Mrs. Crane. Effe will was dated Sept. 12, 1912. Mrs. Crane named her husband and Allan Forbes as executors.

Rule License in Inner Trousers Is Not Accessible

A Suffolk jury decided today, in the case of Wesley Ellis, that the pocket of a second or inner pair of trousers is not an "accessible place," within the meaning of the law, in which to keep an automobile license.

Ellis was held up in his car by two policemen in front of the Shubert Theatre recently. They acted to see his license to operate a car. Ellis said he had it right with him. He stood up and dug in one pocket and another.

Then Ellis got out of the car, stood on the walk and searched all his pockets that the policemen could see. No license. He was summoned to court.

He appealed from the lower court and in the Superior Court today said that he found his license an hour after the policemen left him; that he had on two pairs of trousers and that the license was in a pocket of the second or inner pair.

The jury took only twenty minutes to find Ellis guilty.

VICTIM AMBUSHED IN REVERE BY FIANCE, WHO KILLS HIMSELF

David L. Piscopo, a Boston druggist of property and literary attainments, ambushed Miss Tina de Francisco in the yard of her Revere home today, shot her fatally and then committed suicide with poison and a bullet because their mutual love, once running smoothly, had become hopelessly blocked, as the girl thought, by the renewed interference of her father, James de Francisco. The girl victim was nineteen.

BASED WRITTEN STORY ON THEIR ROMANCE.

Pathetic love letters from the girl and the manuscript of a love story in Italian, by Piscopo, recounting their unhappy romance, told of the frenzied despair which prompted the heart-broken lover's double crime.

Miss de Francisco was shot down at the side door of the De Francisco home at No. 85 Revere street, Revere, from a distance of less than twenty feet. Piscopo was concealed behind the curtain at the second-story window of a vacant house, No. 81, next door, which he recently bought. After the girl, her head almost shattered by two shotgun charges, had been rushed, dying, to the Massachusetts General Hospital, Piscopo was found on the attic floor of the vacant house, dead. He had swallowed poison in a cyanide and then sent a bullet into his left temple.

In a green bag on a table in the attic was found the manuscript of Piscopo's story of his own love, entitled:

"IN LOVE BEAUTIFUL."

Story of Dante."

The closing paragraph, freshly written, read:

"From now on her soul will join with mine, not to be released again."

Among the dead youth's effects at his home, No. 366 Hanover street, were found several despairing love letters from Miss de Francisco.

Breathe Tender Affection.

The letters breathe the tender affection of the girl for the youth of her heart, the sorrow at their troubles, her prayers that he be not angry with her and her repeated girlish pledges that "I will always love you until I die—I will always take your part—I will always follow your footsteps."

Strong phrases of love, like "Stay in peace, my David," "I will stand strong by your side," and "With so much love in my heart for you," showed how the girl bared her innocent heart in her writings.

Each letter also contained a warning to "be careful." The letters read as follows:

My Dear and True David:

I am writing you these few lines not to make you worry. Don't feel sad about what they say. Don't think about that at all, David, I hate to see you sad. I feel sad because I did not want my mother to speak that way to you. Don't worry. I will always love you, always until I die. I will take your part and stand strong by your side." Dear David, I know that you feel sad and mad, but don't blame me. Because I would do anything you tell me to. You know it too. You know how much I love you. You can't imagine how much I suffer to see you mad. Don't be angry with me. I know that I am making you go through a lot of trouble.

Don't blame me, because you know that I love you more than any body in this world. Now don't worry.

I will call you up sometime tomorrow afternoon and I'll try to come to Boston Thursday. Be careful when you go home tonight.

Your true and faithful and sincere companion. TINA.

Will Always Follow.

My True David:—With so much love in my heart for you I am writing to make you happy. I am happy today because I know you are feeling well of mind. Stay in peace, my David. Everything will come out all right. I am always with you.

I will always follow your footsteps. Where you go I will go. Dear David, don't work hard today. Don't worry at all. I will always love you, always until I die. I cannot write a long letter, because you know I have not had time. Be careful now.

I will always think of you and will always love you until I die.

From your loving and young forever,

P. S.—Come tomorrow. I am waiting for you tomorrow.

Sensitive Over Small Size.

David L. Piscopo was understood, so much so that he was sensitive about it. Mr. d'Francisco objected to him as a prospective son-in-law on that account, according to Tina's mother.

Piscopo had worked hard to make a place for himself. He had saved enough, at least, to buy the house next door to the de Francisco home. He had studied literature. He was familiar with Dante's immortal works as shown by the allusions to the Italian poet in the manuscript of his own love story. He held himself, though small of stature, as worthy of the hand of the girl he loved.

More than that, he had won the girl's heart. They had been engaged once. The Christmas before last Tina's father, yielding to his daughter's pleading, had consented to their engagement. Piscopo's betrothal ring was put on the girl's finger. The youth gave her many presents.

But two months ago the engagement was broken. Mrs. de Francisco, sobbing over her dying daughter after the shooting, said that Tina broke the engagement and returned Piscopo's ring and presents.

But it is said that the girl still loved Piscopo passionately, with all the strength of her Latin nature, and that she had declared she never would give him up.

It is also said that recently Piscopo met Tina and her mother on the street, that he threatened the girl and the family and that there was a scene.

This may be what Tina alluded to in that letter where she said she was sorry her mother spoke to Piscopo so when they met.

Despaired, Says Brother.

Saverio Piscopo, brother of David, said that David had declared life was not worth living and that he did not know what he would do.

David L. Piscopo was twenty-five years old and was in the Columbus Pharmacy at No. 147 Richmond street, North End. He was one of three sons of Mrs. Chira Piscopo, a widow, at No. 300 Hanover street. The third brother is Vito Piscopo.

Planning with Cunning.

The shooting was planned with deliberate cunning. Piscopo bought a shotgun, revolver, shells and cartridges. He bought one or two from the drug store—a bottle of poison in capsules.

With his uncompleted manuscript of his own love story, with a bottle of ink and new pens, with cigarettes for his last smoking, he slipped into the house he had bought and carried out his elaborate scheme for murder and suicide.

Mrs. James de Francisco, mother of the girl and the first to reach her after the shooting, said later:

What Her Mother Says.

"My husband never cared for Piscopo, he was so small. But Tina liked him at first, anyhow.

"A year ago last Christmas they became engaged. My husband allowed it because Tina seemed to love him.

"But ten months ago she broke the engagement and returned his ring and presents. I don't know why. None of us has seen him since. Tina had not seen him so far as I know.

"We heard that he said he would kill her and all her family, but we took no notice of it."

The de Francisco have a comfortable home. Mr de Francisco is in the jewelry business in Boston. The house next door, No. 81, had been owned by Edward Butler. Mr. Butler sold the property to Piscopo and moved out three days ago.

As one faces the de Francisco house the vacant house is next door to the left, on the same side as the side door of the de Francisco house.

Screened by Lace Curtain.

A second floor side window in the vacant house is directly opposite and about twenty-five feet away from the de Francisco's side door. The range was perfect, even for a shotgun.

On the third-floor attic was an old mattress. The police think that Piscopo waited on this mattress for dawn to come, then wrote the final entry in his tragic love story.

He had written fully sixty pages, in a small Italian hand, in blue ink, of this tale. He called it, in Italian

"IN LOVE BEAUTIFUL;
Story of Dante."

The manuscript is written in the first person. It begins to relate "my love for Tina, from the time I met her on Pomona street."

The blue ink shows that it was begun several months ago, probably at the time the engagement was broken. Toward the close the blue ink looks fresher.

But the final tragic paragraph, "From now her soul will join with mine, not to be released again"—is in newly-written black ink.

It is supposed that Piscopo wrote that "finis" to his story when dawn broke. It took him but a moment. Then he took his new, double-barreled shotgun, stole down to the second floor, crouched behind the lace curtains, waving gently back of the opened rear window, and waited to kill his former sweetheart.

How Tragedy Was Staged.

Miss de Francisco started from the house at 7:15. She carried her lunch in a box and a book, "Six Girls," to read on the train.

The unsuspecting girl went down the steps to the boardwalk which ran parallel to the house out to Revere street. As she reached the boardwalk she turned to the right, presenting her left side toward the youth clutching his loaded shotgun twenty feet from her.

Piscopo knew that when the girl started to turn she would sicken para a hit. At that moment he fired the first barrel. The charge of No. 12 shot struck the girl on the left side of the head and face. She dropped, dying. Even as she fell Piscopo let go the second barrel, sending another charge into her head and face.

She fell on the board walk, staining the planks red.

The first one at her side was her mother, who ran from the side door, followed by her father. Then neighbors came, then a doctor, finally the police and ambulance.

The girl could not speak. Her mother, aided by Frederic Sansale of No. 71 Ambrose street, carried her into the kitchen. Dr. Edwin Park came. At first glance he called the police and ordered her to a hospital. She was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital in an auto ambulance. Dr. Park accompanying her.

At 2 o'clock the girl was alive but without chance for recovery, according to the physicians.

Meanwhile the slayer had ended his own wretched life. Leaving the smoking shotgun by the open window on the second floor, he went back to the attic. He uncorked the bottle of poison capsules and swallowed one. Then he stretched himself on the mattress and fired one revolver bullet into his left temple. Death was probably instantaneous.

MRS. LEFTY FLYNN CAMPS IN HOME TOWN OF HUSBAND

NEW YORK, May 1.—Mrs. Lefty Flynn's efforts in the interests of peace between herself and the Flynns ever since her sudden marriage to the former Yale football hero last Fall, when she deserted the footlights for the limelight, caused her to stop off in Syracuse, where her father-in-law lives, on her way to Canada to scour the Dominion for her missing husband three weeks ago, so friends of the couple in New York learned. The former chorus girl has camped on her husband's family doorstep, so to speak, by taking up her residence in the apartments of her sister, Miss A. Leary, at the Onondaga Hotel.

The members of Flynn's family in Syracuse, it is said, are well aware that the ex-collegian's bride is in town, but they haven't any idea why she is there and don't seem inquisitive enough to ask her.

MISS NELLIE O'CONNOR, cashier at the Hotel Venice, who foiled bandit while looking into the muzzle of a pistol.

Miss Nellie O'Connor, plucky cashier in the Hotel Venice, No. 185 Hanover street, North End, is being congratulated today on the display of nerve by which, although looking into the muzzle of a hold-up man's revolver, she saved her employers from being robbed of a considerable sum of money.

She was ordered by the bandit to open the cash register. Forced to obey the command she handed over $9 in bills and was then told to swing back the door of the safe. She claimed she did not know the combination, and remained firm in the face of threats.

When the man saw she either could not or would not open the safe he told her he would surely shoot her if she followed him or made any outcry. She kept quiet until he was part way down the stairs and then dashed after him, crying for help.

The man, whose deed and description tallies with that of the robber of the Peabody Co-operative Savings Bank, got away, and no trace of him could be found by the pursuers, who included a number of the hotel employes and the police.

According to Miss O'Connor the thief appeared to be an Armenian. She said he was about five feet eight inches in height, weighed about 160 pounds, and wore dark clothes and a derby hat.

He was first noticed when he came to the hotel bar. He stayed there for some time, and then went up to the office on the second floor, where Miss O'Connor was in charge, and alone at the time.

He told her that he wanted to hire a room. She turned to the key rack to see what rooms were available. When she again faced the man a revolver was pointed at her head.

Lieutenant Crowley of the Hanover street station detailed Sergeant O'Donnell and Special Officer McDonald to follow up the case.

FIND JANITOR GAGGED; PROBE HOLDUP STORY

Walter Watts, janitor at the Continental Clothing Company at Washington and Boylston streets, was found at 7 a. m. today handcuffed to a post on the first floor of the store.

Watts claims he was attacked early today and severely beaten by two men who gagged and handcuffed him and bound him to the post and threatened to shoot him if he made an outcry.

He was found by Assistant Janitor Robert E. Benjamin. He sawed off the support to release Watts, who was in a state of collapse.

The police were called and Watts taken to the Relief Hospital. Watts had a big, ugly bruise in the centre of his forehead and abrasions on each cheek bone. He complained of pains in his sides, where, he says, the men who assaulted him, beat him. His coat was ripped up the back, he claims, in the struggle with the would-be robbers.

He was taken to the Lagrange street station and locked up. Special Officer Anderson was sent to the store. He found a small bottle of ordinary gyceline and a package of old clothes lying beside the safe in the rear of the store.

There were no traces of any struggle. Officer Anderson made a tour of the store and found all windows and doors locked. He could not find how anybody effected an entrance.

Meanwhile the police are investigating the case.

'LORD ASHBURTON' TAKES JAIL TERM; HALTS APPEAL

Charles Richards, alias Lord Ashburton, seventy-four years old, accepted his sentence of six months in the House of Correction today in the Quincy Court, on the charge of stealing $100 in cash and $50 in bonds from Patrick Kelleher, a Neponset blacksmith, two years ago. On Saturday Richards was released at Deer Island after serving thirteen months on a similar charge. He was arrested when he landed in Boston. He appealed, but today walked into court and withdrew the appeal.

FOSS USES VETO TO SCORE ENROLMENT

Governor Foss today again urged upon the Legislature the need of the abolition of party enrolment in a message accompanying a veto of a bill extending the time for making changes in the party enrolment. The message says in part:

"The general opinion has been that voters give little attention to such matters until immediately prior to the primaries. This statement receives ample demonstration in the fact that, although a great new political party was created at the last election, with thousands of avowed followers, the number of voters enrolled in such party at the present date is almost infinitesimal.

"In my opinion, the proper remedy is the abolition of party enrolment, with a party column ballot in the primary and the confining of voters to the column of one party if party responsibility is deemed desirable."

FALL RIVER INFANT DEATH RATE LEADS

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Fall River leads all cities in the federal report on deaths of infants, just published. It has a rate of 289.8 to every 1,000. Rhode Island, with 181.6, has the highest death rate for States. New Hampshire is second with 164.0.

SUFFRAGETTES IN NEW WAR ON GOVERNMENT

LONDON, May 1.—Real war exists today between the British government and the militant suffragettes, the latter being represented by their organization, the Women's Social and Political Union.

Although the police are still in possession of the headquarters of the union, the influential members of the organization who have so far escaped jail declared that the work of harassing the government would go on as usual.

Orders were given at Scotland Yard to prevent at any cost the publication today of the suffragette newspaper printed by the Union and called The Suffragette.

The women editors defied the police, declaring that today's issue would be on the streets as usual during the late afternoon and evening.

Miss Annie Kenney, one of Mrs. Pankhurst's chief lieutenants, arrested yesterday, today was remanded for further examination.

It was brought out that Miss Kenney had been shadowed by detectives from Paris, whither she had gone to consult with Christobel Pankhurst, to this city.

ISADORA DUNCAN STILL TO DANCE

PARIS, May 1.—Isadora Duncan, the actress, who lost two children by drowning in the Seine, says she will still devote her life to dancing.

MRS. ROBERT P. BASS, whose beauty amazed and dazzled the natives of Tripoli. Mrs. Bass was Miss Edith Bird of Walpole before her marriage to the former Governor of New Hampshire.

NEW STANLAWS GIRL BRIDE OF FAMED ARTIST

NEW YORK, May 1.—Penrhyn Stanlaws Adamson, the artist, whose creations of feminine beauty have won him fame both in this country and abroad, has today drawn another "Stanlaws girl." This time, though, the drawing wasn't with crayon, but in Dan Cupid's lottery.

In other words, Mr. Adamson, who is better known as Penrhyn Stanlaws, has married, having found his ideal in Miss Jean Pugsley, daughter of Lester P. Bryant, of New York and Paris, to whom he was married at a Fifth avenue hotel in the presence of a representative gathering from the social and artistic worlds. The wedding took place yesterday, but there will be no honeymoon until late Fall, when they plan to go abroad.

It was about a dozen years ago that the "Stanlaws Girl" first made her appearance. Adamson at that time was an undergraduate of Princeton. He stuck to his own distinctive type of American girl and was as successful abroad as here. In Paris he studied at the Julian Academy and under Benjamin Constant and Jean Paul Laurens.

FRIEND OF BORDEN GIRL IS IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 1.—Mrs. W. J. White, who figured in the Ramona Borden disappearance, is here with her husband. Mrs. White says the Borden incident is closed.

'Slim Ladies Only,' Is Slogan for the Suffrage Pageant

NEW YORK, May 1.—"Men may be stout, if tall, but women may not be fat at all." This policy, adopted by the suffrage pageant committee was strictly enforced during the rehearsal at the Metropolitan Opera House for tomorrow evening's performance.

After several stormy interviews with women who admitted weighing nearly 200 pounds, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw was called into counsel.

"You are perfectly right," said Mrs. Laidlaw, "we cannot have fat women taking part. It would simply spoil the beautiful effect of classic lines and Grecian character."

At the full dress rehearsal tonight the men will appear in tunic costume. They will wear sandals, refusing to appear in bare feet.

B. U. TRUSTEES ASK $100 ANNUALLY OF EVERY ALUMNUS

To save the institution from receiving indebtedness each of the alumni of Boston University is called upon to subscribe $100 annually on the first day of March, to bear interest at 3 per cent, by the trustees of the university. The trustees declare that the students and alumni have been given a service that has cost its treasury $1,607,139.91 more than has been received from tuitions and endowments.

MRS. W. J. BRYAN'S REST CURE ENDED

Mrs. Robert Bass, Beauty Dazzles Natives in Tripoli

The beauty of Mrs. Robert P. Bass, who was Miss Edith Bird of Walpole, staggered the natives in Tripoli, who looked upon an unveiled woman for the first time, when Mrs. Bass and her husband, the former Governor of New Hampshire, made a trip to the frontier on donkeys, during their honeymoon in Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. Bass returned to New York on the White Star liner Olympic and their experiences in Africa became the talk of passengers on the way across. Mrs. Bass found much amusement and some annoyance at the open-mouthed wonder of the natives, who stared at her as though she were a goddess.

"BRAZILIAN TROT" LATEST IN PARIS

NEW YORK, May 1.—Joan Sawyer, the swiftest turkey trotter that ever saw Broadway, has returned from Paris with the Brazilian trot, a dance that is faster and more bewildering than a combination of all the dances so far invented. "It's the only thing in the world," said Mrs. Sawyer. "You can dance the Brazilian trot instead of eating or drinking."

METCALF BACK TO HELP SOLVE BANK TANGLE

PROVIDENCE, May 1.—Edward P. Metcalf, former president of the Atlantic National Bank that suspended with liabilities of about $2,750,000, began today to assist the federal authorities in learning the exact financial status of the institution.

Unknown to but a few friends and several representatives of the Comptroller of Currency, Mr. Metcalf reached Providence last night at 9 o'clock from New York.

MORE PAY FOR 3,500; THREE UNIONS STRIKE

Thirty-five hundred men holding membership in nine different unions secured substantial wage and working condition betterments locally today without a strike, while only 250 members of three other unions struck in order to enforce the demands of their respective organizations. Here is the list:

Strike of elevator-repair mechanics at three shops in Boston proper and Cambridge, for eight-hour day without reduction of pay.

Ship carpenters of East Boston and Chelsea strike for raise in pay of fifty cents an hour.

Carriage, wagon and automobile workers at Brookline go out to enforce union demands for Saturday half-holiday during the Summer months.

Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union gets wages increased from $4.50 to $5 a day for journeymen, and from $3.36 to $3.60 for helpers, without a strike on any of the large jobs.

The Layers' Union under a no-strike settlement secures advance from $4.50 to $5.20, and from $3 to $3.36 for mechanics and helpers in order named.

Lumber teamsters are given an advance of $1 a week, and market house teamsters a graded increase of $1, both unions settling without recourse to a strike.

Wood, wire and metal lathers of Boston, Quincy, Brockton are advanced from fifty-five cents an hour to sixty cents, a no-strike agreement reached by their union.

Horseshoers are promised a raise of $2 a week, with a $21 minimum, and refrain from striking until the offer is passed upon by their union at a special meeting tomorrow night.

Hebrew Bakers start working on an eight-and-a-half-hour day basis, under an agreement secured by their union, with provision made for an eight-hour day next year.

Harness Makers' Union gets raise of twenty-five cents a day in all but one shop, without calling men out on strike.

Bottlers' and Drivers' Union gets raise ranging from fifty cents to $2 a week without trouble of any kind, under an agreement with the employers.

Edith Wharton Expected to File Plea for Divorce

PARIS, May 1.—The rumor current a short time ago that Mrs. Edith Wharton, the American novelist, was about to bring a suit for divorce is insistently renewed here. It is impossible to learn details, but there seems to be some ground for the story.

The couple are said to be living apart. It is added that the disagreements between them have passed beyond the possibility of reconciliation.

Versions vary as to whether the proceedings will be brought in New York or in France.

RAILWAY COMPANY RAISES 4,000 MEN

BALTIMORE, May 1.—Four thousand employes of the United Railways & Electric Company were surprised today to learn that the board of directors had passed a resolution to increase their wages by approximately 8½ per cent.

Burley Tobacco Field Grown for DILL'S Look Out

ROUGH AND READY

There is just a small section out of all the tobacco growing districts where choice Burley Tobacco can be grown. All of Dill's "Look Out" Pipe Tobacco comes from this favored section, where soil and climate combine to produce the perfection of tobacco quality. From these fields come only the best for the Dills, and every step of curing and ageing is watched carefully. Dill's standard quality, set up by them forty years ago, is the same standard today.

Dill's "Look Out" is strictly "Rough and Ready" cut for the pipe, you shake it from the handy tin into the pipe bowl for the smoothest, most satisfying smoke you ever enjoyed! The same Dill's quality as always.

It's 10c. Get it—Try it.

This is the Famous Order Check which enables men and women to obtain Credit at their favorite stores for the Cash Bargain Prices and PAY $1.00 A WEEK.

THE Stylish Dress shown on the left was purchased by one of our customers at a big department store with N. Sallinger's Order Check. The mark down price showed a saving of $7.00. At the old style credit or instalment store the price would probably be $7.00 more, instead of $7.00 less, an exorbitant cost that it is not necessary for any woman to pay when she wants credit.

N. SALLINGER,
Originator of the Famous Order Check which enables men and women to obtain Credit at their favorite stores for the Cash Bargain Prices, and PAY $1.00 A WEEK.

I give you credit to any amount for anything you like at the big Department or Specialty Stores. You buy at the stores for the advertised cash bargain prices. My order check is accepted the same as cash, presented after purchase is made. No questions asked; goods delivered without delay. You pay the Peoples Credit Co. $1.00 a week until your bill is paid. My arrangements with the big Department and other Reliable Stores is for the purpose of taking care of customers who need credit—and to keep them out of the clutches of the old style credit concerns who overcharge for inferior goods—that's all.

MELLEN BOOKKEEPING HIDES THE TRUTH ABOUT RAILROAD, SAYS PROUTY

I have to make of your bookkeeping, Mr. Choate, is that it doesn't represent the facts. It does not represent the true conditions or the actual value of assets. That is my criticism of the system of bookkeeping throughout.

"Here we find charged up as worth $950,000 the steamships Rhode Island and Connecticut. These were purchased in 1904. They were used four years. Yet in 1908 no charges were made for depreciation and on your books after four years of use Mr. Brown finds they were given a valuation of excessive amount.

"Now I claim that there must have been some depreciation in their valuation, and this was shown by the fact that two years later, in 1910, both steamers were sent to the scrap heap.

Challenged Choate's Contention.

This rebuke of the New Haven's accounting methods came while Mr. Choate was trying to show that the New Haven's methods of listing these steamers on its books was an honest one and according to the general system adopted by marine transportation companies.

Mr. Choate showed by Auditor Brown that in June, 1910, a depreciation was recorded against the Rhode Island for $125,000 and on the Connecticut for $175,000, that the book value of the Rhode Island was $180,000, and the book value of the Connecticut was $200,000, and in August 31, 1910, the Connecticut was scrapped and brought an salvage $8,507.13, and that $101,496.07 was charged to income; that $26,500 was charged up to cost of boilers.

He showed that the Rhode Island was scrapped in August, 1910, for $9,000 salvage and that $141,000 was charged up as book value.

Mr. Choate—"Have you any criticism to make, Mr. Brown, of that method of listing the steamers?"

Mr. Brown—"I have not."

Chairman Prouty—I don't understand there has been any criticism along these lines, Mr. Choate. What I question and what I criticize is why these boats when transferred to the New England Navigation Company in 1904 for $950,000 as the total value of both boats, why they were not properly accounted for as to their depreciation.

Not Properly Charged Up.

Mr. Choate—It appears in 1898 they were appraised at $650,000 and the books showed an additional $282,000 was expended for improvements.

Chairman Prouty—That may be so, but we must not forget that they were used four years and no depreciation charged against them.

Mr. Choate—Not quite four years, only about two years.

Chairman Prouty—From 1904 to 1908 is four years, isn't it, Mr. Choate?

Mr. Choate—Yes.

Chairman Prouty—And I repeat that they were still charged up as worth $950,000 jointly, and less than three years later they were sent to the scrap heap. Now, they were not properly charged up. That lies here the fault of your bookkeeping throughout. It represents facts which are not true facts, and it is true facts we want. Your books should be conducted along those lines, and I charge your books do not reflect the actual value of assets.

Mr. Choate I understand the same methods were employed by other marine transportation companies.

Chairman Prouty—That does not make any difference. The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that transportation companies must make proper accounts and reports.

Mr. Choate—But that was only two years ago.

Chairman Prouty—That doesn't make any difference. You should represent true values on your books.

ROSE LOOMIS, eleven-year-old girl found at the North Station today and whose strange story police are investigating in the hope of locating her parents.

WANT LOCAL MAN FOR GYM DIRECTOR

More than 100 women members of the Brookline Gymnasium class today petitioned the Gymnasium and Bath Committee of that town to rescind the vote appointing S. K. Nason of Malden physical director of the Brookline Gymnasium. Charles [illegible]son, acting director, who has served the town as gymnasium instructor for six years, is wanted on the grounds of ability and previous service, and because he is a local man.

POLICE PROBE STRANGE STORY TOLD BY A GIRL

Crying as though her heart would break because she could not find her brother, Rose Loomis, a pretty black-eyed girl of eleven, was found outside the North Station, early today. When taken to police headquarters she told a strange story which the police are investigating in the hope of finding her parents.

The girl's teeth were chattering and her hands and face were blue from exposure when she was discovered by a young man, whom she told of her plight. The stranger wrapped the girl in his sweater and took her to Pemberton square.

Deputy Superintendent Cain found her mother's name was Mrs. Anna Telford and that she lived at Greenwood and Franklin streets, Springfield. Rose said she lived with her mother until about the first of April, when a woman, whose name she did not know, brought her to Boston and left her at a house in Dorchester.

Ten days ago, she declared, the woman came after her and took her to a house in Swampscott. The girl does not remember the name of the family she lived with in Swampscott or the street where the house was situated. She says she helped around the house until last night, when she received a telegram from her brother saying her mother was dying in Springfield and to meet him at the North station. The telegram, she said, she threw into the fire as the woman of the house told her to do.

She missed the last train from Swampscott to Boston and rode in on the electric cars. She got off at the station and waited several hours for her brother. She insisted upon her story after four repetitions.

The girl was taken to the Chardon Street lissue. She had two twelve-trip tickets on the Boston & Maine, two half-tickets between Swampscott and Lynn and $1.50 she said she had saved out of the money given her on her last birthday.

The girl's black hair was cut short and she wore a black and white checked dress trimmed with blue ribbons. Her white lace hat was trimmed with pink ribbon.

The Dorchester, Springfield and Swampscott police are investigating the story.

MAN IS ARRESTED ON DEATH CHARGE

LOWELL, May 1.—John Murphy of this city was arrested on a charge of killing Samuel Beluman at Nantygie, Pa., on February, 1912, the arrest being made at the request of District Attorney Charles C. Greer of Cambria County, Pa. Murphy is 23 years old, and was found at No. 66 East Merrimack street. He offered to return to Pennsylvania without extradition proceedings, and told the police that on the night that Beluman was killed he was at home with a younger brother. They heard the shots fired, and, running out found Beluman lying on the railroad tracks, with two bullets in his body.

SOMERVILLE MAN DEAD IN STREET

Charles Booth, aged seventy-one, who for more than fifty years has resided at No. 40 Alfred street, Medford, fell dead of heart disease today. Mr. Booth was walking along Cross street, East Somerville, when stricken.

He had been engaged in the coal and wood business in Medford for many years.

MISS RYDER HEAD OF WELLESLEY 1914

In being elected president of the class of 1914, Wellesley, Miss Esther Ryder, Rochester, N. Y., has been honored for the third time by her classmates. Miss Ryder was president of the class in her sophomore year, and was vice-president in her freshman year.

Don't Blame the Drunkard

He's More To Be Pitied Than Blamed—How To Help Him

No one better than the victim himself knows the strength of the chains that hold him in bondage. Pity him. Help him. Don't kick him and cuff him and discourage him. He can be rescued without knowing what cured him.

Just to show what you can do for him, take the case of Mrs. I. A. Woods, a real estate agent in Dade City, Florida, whose cook—a girl 20 years old—got drunk every Saturday night. Mrs. Woods gave her one dose of Renova in a glass of soda. The poor girl didn't know she was taking Renova, but hasn't had the slightest desire for liquor since.

If you know anyone who ought to quit drinking you have a duty to perform; give him Renova; just go to Riker-Jaynes for a package and put a little of it in his tea, coffee, soups, etc.; he won't suspect it at all because it's tasteless and guaranteed absolutely harmless.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a dollar package, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

FIGHT FOR PUBLICITY IN HEARING ON BANK LOOTING BY COLEMAN

Believing the public is entitled to know the full details of how George W. Coleman wrecked the National City Bank of Cambridge, the AMERICAN has begun a campaign to open the doors of the hearing before a master on the latest phase of the $300,000 failure.

Many circumstances surrounding Coleman's loss of much of this money to the gang of bogus faro plotters, of whom "Big Bill" Kelliher was a member, have never been brought out. They are believed to be contained in the testimony Coleman is giving before Judge Robert O. Harris, sitting as a master in a star chamber session.

Fight Against Secrecy.

This hearing, conducted in Room 325 at the Suffolk County Courthouse, is on the suit of Receiver Bates of the bank to hold the directors of the defunct institution to account financially for part of the depositors' losses.

The AMERICAN'S protest against a star chamber session, begun yesterday, was continued today. Neither Receiver Bates, stockholders or depositors have been able to learn all the details of how a $12 a week clerk could ride a supposedly conservative and successful bank. The bank directors have continually opposed publicity of any part of the affairs of the institution.

Former Governor John L. Bates, as receiver, seeks to have the directors bear their share of financial responsibility for the loss of the bank's money.

Counsel for the directors are fighting publicity. Receiver Bates has no objection to publicity. Master Harris takes the position that he is called into the case by two contending parties and that with these parties divided on the matter of open sessions, he cannot act to end the star chamber proceedings.

Under the ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the United Shoe Machinery Company of Beverly, hearings held by masters and notaries must be public.

Supreme Court authority in Massachusetts holds that in this State all such hearings must also be in open court.

Judge Harris said, in reply to the objections of Attorney Pillsbury to publicity:

I believe that there is much to the contention of the Boston AMERICAN, but I favor the matter being passed upon in some way by a judge of the United States Court.

"We could get around it this way," argued Attorney Pillsbury. "We could claim due regard for the seating capacity of the room."

"Well," replied Master Harris, "we could get a bigger room. As a matter of fact I'd be willing to have the hearing conducted on the Common."

The AMERICAN'S letter, demanding publicity for the hearing, is as follows:

Demand for Facts.

Boston, Mass., April 30, 1913.

Hon. Robert O. Harris, Sitting as Master in Case of John L. Bates, Receiver, vs. Directors of the late National City Bank of Cambridge:

My Dear Sir—I demand to be admitted to the hearings now being conducted by you as master in the suit against the directors of the National City Bank of Cambridge brought by the receiver.

This hearing is being conducted by you to the exclusion of the public. I respectfully represent that this hearing is being conducted within a building owned by a county of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; you have no right sitting as master, under the present laws of the United States, to deny access to these hearings, to any citizen of the Commonwealth, having due regard to the seating capacity of the room.

As such a citizen, I demand admittance.

Yours respectfully,

JAS. E. DONOGHUE,
Boston AMERICAN Editorial Department.

Master Harris later to the AMERICAN reported that he had no disposition to interfere with open sessions, but would wait, since conferring counsel could not agree, until an opinion from a Federal Circuit Court judge was received.

George W. Coleman today continued his story of how the depositors' accounts were despoiled and the work hidden by his juggling of the books.

O'Sullivan's Heels are already worn by a million Americans

No man is older than his walk

It is the man who slouches and shambles along through life—listless, depressed, always tired out—who is really old.

And he is really old, as far as efficiency is concerned, even if he hasn't reached the voting age.

The man with the keen, eager step—full of energy, confidence, success—he is always young, no matter if he is a grandfather.

O'Sullivanize your walk

Get the head-up, chest-out stride that commands success.

It is the jar and pound of hard leather heels on hard, dead pavements that are doing more than anything else to tire out and wear down the modern man. Every such step is a distinct shock to the nervous system and this pounding of thousands of steps a day takes the keen edge off any man or woman's energy.

The sparkling eye, the buoyant step and the confident optimism which make a man young (whatever age he may be) are the result of a delicate adjustment of mind, nerve and muscle.

O'Sullivan's Heels absorb shocks. They are to the human body what a rubber tire is to an automobile. They are made of new live rubber with the spring in it.

Get a pair at your shoemaker's—he'll put them on for only 50c—then see the difference for yourself.

They are for everybody—men, women and children.

Ask for rubber heels by the name: "O'Sullivan's".

MAY FAIR at GILCHRIST'S

Commences Today

Many stores hold May White Sales in a half dozen or more departments. This is logical and good business, because May is the morning of the summertime, when so many lighter, summer clothes and things for the home must be purchased.

Gilchrist's May Fair is More Than a White Sale. It includes every department in this great store. No store can truthfully offer all bargains all the time, and stay in business. This is what we have prepared for—

A full month of unusual economies in just the goods New England people desire for summer.

SHATTERED ROMANCE OF MRS. GANNON SHOWN BY HER DIVORCE SUIT

The shattered romance of Mrs. Isabelle Mutard Lee-Gannon, an attractive Boston brunette, and her husband, Montgomery C. Gannon, manager of the Quinby Jewelry Company, became known this afternoon when it was learned that the husband's property has been attached in non-support proceedings brought by the wife in the Suffolk Probate Court.

The story of how the couple met, wedded after a brief courtship and then parted makes another chapter in the interesting career of the wife, who first came into prominence several years ago when she was the central figure in a $100,000 breach-of-promise suit.

Sues for Divorce.

It also came to light today that Mrs. Gannon has filed a suit for divorce. She was a divorcee when she married him a little over a year ago. They separated last Fall. The wife says the whole trouble is "too much temperament."

"I could live with him still were it not for his temperament," she said to an AMERICAN reporter.

Gannon charges that his wife "took" his automobile from in front of a downtown barber shop. In reply she declared at the car is her own and that it was present from her husband before their marriage. She asked him for an auto in the place of a diamond engagement ring.

"You see, I had diamonds enough for our station in life, and I told him so," she stated. "So he bought me an auto."

"It is really too bad, all of the trouble, because I could really care for Mr. Gannon. The whole trouble is his temperament. He has some very fine qualities."

Story of the Romance.

This is Mr. Gannon's story of how he fell in love with Mrs. Lee, married her after a brief courtship and then parted with her after less than a year.

"I first met my wife in January, last year. In that month I inserted this ad in the Boston papers:

WANTED—A comfortable room in a private family in or near Boston, with a stable or shed connected where I may keep my auto.

"On January 21, 1912, I received this letter:

I am sorry I have no stable or shed where you can keep your auto. I am a widow, thirty-nine years old, living alone. If you care to call, telephone number ——. I will give you my name later.

"I called. She was living on Columbus avenue. It was a case of love at first sight for me. I loved her the minute I saw her. We were married February 3, 1912, in Portland, Me. Then we came to Boston to live.

"One day I remarked to her about a large picture that hung on the wall. It was a man's picture. I asked her if that was the picture of her first husband.

"'No,' she replied, 'that's my little jewel. That's Mr. Jewell.'

"Frequently she would refer to the picture as that of 'her little jewel.'

Separated Last Fall.

"Later my wife told me she was not thirty-nine, but was forty-six years old.

"In Fall we separated. On December 4 she sued me for divorce. She charged me with being cruel and abusive.

"On April 21 my wife served an attachment on my money in the Commonwealth Trust Company and also served an attachment on the Vinal Motor Renting Company. This latter was to cover my auto, I imagine. The amount was $1,000.

"The next I heard of her was last Friday. I went in my auto to Henry Cohen's shop in Otis street. I got a shave, leaving an overcoat I bought in Paris in the car. I left my auto in Otis street and came to my place of business in Purchase street. While I was gone, a woman came along with a man. They cranked up the machine and off they went. I have no doubt they had been following me.

"Mr. Cohen saw the woman and gave me an accurate description of her. This tallied with a description of my wife.

"As I told you, we lived together less than a year. When we separated I told her to come down to the bank.

"'You take half of my money, and I'll take the other half,' I told her. 'Then you leave me alone and I'll leave you alone.'

"It was quite a tidy sum. I was perfectly willing to give her half of it. Later she told me she was going to die suit for non-support.

Mrs. Gannon was the divorced wife of George T. Lee, an East Boston blacksmith, by whom she had three sons. She divorced Lee in 1900.

Mrs. Gannon is a woman of attractive appearance. Following her divorce from Lee, she lived on Massachusetts avenue. Later she moved to West Newton street. Still later she moved to Columbus avenue, where she was living when she met and married Gannon. At the time of her breach of promise suit, she lived with one of her three sons. The other two sons lived with their father.

THREE IMPORTANT PURE FOOD BILLS IN SENATE TODAY

Three important food measures are before the Senate for consideration today. One, the bill to prohibit the sale of unwholesome or rotten food, was debated yesterday.

This bill is an amendment to the present law. Under the present law it is stated that persons selling rotten food cannot be prosecuted. The amendment would make it possible to prevent these sales of rotten food.

In the Senate yesterday, Senator Williams moved to amend the proposed measure in a manner that would nullify it and restore the present ineffective law. The question is over the presence of the word "knowingly" in the bill, which was introduced by Harry P. Cassidy.

Senators Mack, Clark, Stearns and McCarthy fought to keep the bill in its effective form and to protect the public from rotten foods. Senator Hilton introduced a second amendment, and Senator Williams withdrew his amendment. The bill then went over to today.

The sausage bill and the ice cream bill are also expected to come up today.

WELCOME MANY TO NEW ELIZABETH PEABODY HOUSE

The climax of the various open functions that have taken place in the new Elizabeth Peabody House occurred last night when the doors were thrown open to the club members and their friends.

Visitors from outside the district were greatly interested to observe the spirit of co-operation among the young people of the House who took upon themselves the ushering and guiding of the throng of neighbors.

The Peabody Associates, one of the oldest clubs connected with the settlement, were in evidence everywhere, efficiently managing the crowds that filled the corridors and rooms.

This club presented the house with a magnificent new American flag, which from now on will be seen flying over the West End from the top of the settlement, which is seven stories above the street.

The first play to initiate the stage was presented by the Julius Caesar Club, while the Chrysanthemum Club of young ladies gave several well-executed folk dances.

FRIEDMANN AGAIN IN MONTREAL TO TREAT PATIENTS

MONTREAL, May 1.—Dr. F. F. Friedmann, discoverer of a serum which he claims is a cure for tuberculosis, arrived here today and gave the second injection to the patients whom he treated during his last visit to this city. Many of the patients are reported to be greatly improved since Friedmann gave them his first treatment.

DRAPER WORKER BEATEN BY 6 MEN IN MILFORD STREET

MILFORD, May 1.—Frank J. Ward of Depot street, an employe of the Draper plant, was attacked by six men he claims were strike-breakers, early today on Central street, Milford. He was knocked down and kicked several times in the face and head.

The end of the first month of the strike of workers at the Hopedale plant of the Draper Company was marked today by the parade from their homes in Milford to Hopedale of about one hundred school children averaging about ten years of age. Ex-Governor Eben S. Draper was at the plant, and watched them as they went on "peaceful picket" duty.

4,000 at Annual May Breakfast in the Lynn Armory

Four thousand people attended the annual May breakfast at the Lynn Armory today. Long before the opening time, 5 o'clock, hundreds of employes of the various shoe factories were in line waiting for admission. There was a large corps of young women, who served as waitresses.

The proceeds will go in aid of the various charitable institutions of Lynn. Mayor George H. Newhall and the members of the municipal council were present.

The committee included Mrs. May L. Sheldon, chairman; Mrs. Mary Louise Brown, Ernest G. Mitchell, Mrs. W. R. Allen, John M. Barry, C. O. Blood, Miss Abby M. Bowen, Miss Emma H. Breed, Mrs. J. W. Harding, Charles H. Hastings, Frank W. Mace, Mrs. A. Lilla Newhall, Edwin W. Park, Mrs. George H. Plummer and Miss Sophia Reed.

Camorrist Priest, Freed, Kisses Earth.

ROME—The Camorrist priest Vitozzi, who at the Viterbo trial was sentenced to six years' hard labor, was released from prison here. Counting the five years spent in jail awaiting trial, he had served his sentence. Vitozzi, who had been confined in the Florence penitentiary, kissed the ground when he was discharged, and loudly proclaimed his innocence. He drove at once to church, where he prayed long. Afterward he started for Naples. One of the Camorrists convicted at Viterbo, Mattei, who is serving twenty years, has gone mad.

GIRL WILL WED 'ABDUCTOR' OR KILL HERSELF

BELFAST, Me., May 1.—Delma May Ingersoll, fifteen, who was found at Wills Cove, Islesboro, with Charles Tenney, thirty-five, a trapper from Boston, declared today, previous to Tenney being tried on the charge of abduction, that if she were not permitted to become the wife of Tenney she would end her life.

"There is no use of trying to separate us," she cried, as the tears of anger streamed down her cheeks. "I love Charley and he loves me. I remained with him on the island and we were happy there until the police took us to Belfast."

The finding of the couple ends a nine days' search. Tenney, who has spent the Winters here for the past three years, disappeared at the same time the ingersoll girl did. As they had been seen frequently in each other's company, it was thought she had been abducted.

Efforts to find them were unavailing until yesterday, when Tenney walked into the store of Captain Burgess at Wills Cove and purchased provisions. Captain Burgess recognized Tenney from a newspaper description.

Tenney accompanied the police willingly to Belfast, but it took much coaxing to persuade the girl to go to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ingersoll.

Mr. Ingersoll stated today that in view of the girl's infatuation for Tenney he might consent to the charges being dropped and allow the couple to be married, if he is convinced that Tenney is not a husband at the present time.

RAILROADS WANT 5% INCREASE IN FREIGHT RATES

NEW YORK, May 1.—The Eastern railroads today formulated plans looking to an increase of 5 per cent. in freight rates. At a meeting held here today by the different railway presidents, a committee consisting of Presidents Brown of the New York Central, Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio and Rea of the Pennsylvania was appointed to appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to advance rates 5 per cent. through the medium of reopening the Eastern advance rate case, which was decided against the railroads in 1910, when they asked for the privilege of advancing tariffs.

B. C. High Nine to Battle St. John's In Contest Today

A battle royal is promised today when the Boston College High nine meets the St. John's Prep team at Danvers in the first game of their annual series. Both teams are out for a win, as it means a hold on the championship of the Catholic prep schools of New England for the team winning the series.

A large crowd will watch the contest and a pitchers' battle is expected, with Bob Gill on the pedals for the Boston College team and Heffernan for the Danvers nine.

While on the Pacific Coast read the San Francisco Examiner

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

IF the faith cure works in baseball, Macnate Jim Gaffney ought to be a well man today. All Winter Gaffney keeps alive his hopes of getting his ball team out of the cellar on the Pacific coast "dope" that Bill James was a "second Christy Mathewson." If there ever was a second Matty, it looks like the Pacific coast "dope" was right.

WHENEVER Gaffney talked he said: "Well, I don't know what we'll do this Summer but anyway, they tell me this boy James is another Matty. I do want to get a peek at that boy."

UNFORTUNATELY Gaffney has not seen James work. The Boston National magnate has been sick since before Stallings cut loose the most ball sycamore.

JAMES pitched his third game yesterday. It was a better effort than his two previous starts and Rudy drew all to the merry. The boy fellow had his baptism on the morning of Patriots' Day. He delivered in slam-bang style for a beginner. The Giants lapped him hard in only one inning, when they collected four hits for three runs. If James had had big league support, as he had yesterday, the score would have been much closer than 7 to 2 against him.

"THAT fellow looks like dwell to make good, with something to spare," said Jeanty Mcginnity after watching James work.

THE coast lad was tried again April 24, against the Brooklyn Dodgers, and this time he "came through" with a splendid and impressive win. In a twelve-inning contest, with "Lefty" Allen, the Giant killer, on the other side, James won, 1 to 0. He struck out nine Dodgers, compared with the seven Giants he fanned. He pitched a remarkably "heady" game and did marvelously cool work in pinches. To a spectator his performance was as interesting as some of Matty's, Wood's, Walsh's and Johnson's in tight fits. James pulled himself out of a tight hole with the bases full in the eleventh and looked like he would last much longer.

YESTERDAY he "came through" again, showing that his previous success was not a "fluke." He never was in distress. The solitary run scored was chargeable to an error by Manarville, who let a fast ball shoot between his legs in the third and fastest scored from second. In the eleventh a double by Myers put him in a hole again. But he pulled out by sphere headwork and wonderful coolness and control under fire.

THE Phillies squeezed through seven nifts and took five bases on balls in the twelve innings. Up to the eleventh one scored, three others reached third and another life advanced to second. Two of those who landed at third were nailed trying to score. Four of the hits were made with two strikes on the batters. The Boston outfield had but one putout in the tenth.

JAMES was aided by the smart work of Bert Whaling, his old battery partner, and by unusually peppery and intelligent ball playing by the team behind him. The absence of Whaling from the Patriots' Day game, by the way, was doubtless responsible for James' failure to show better then.

THESE three successful trials are convincing as to James' big league ability. His acquisition by the Pilgrim process that the best way to get good ball players is to go and buy them. Gaffney purchased James outright at a good price. The Boston Nationals could have had Ray Keating and a number of others the same way. Players secured by draft seldom make good, because the cream of the minor leagues are bought up before the draft is opened. The measure of the Pilgrim magnates' greatness in building up a new team can be taken by the players bought outright during the season.

BASEBALL is not railroading. You can't Mellenize a .250 ball club into a pennant winner.

SHERWOOD MAGEE—the mighty big sticker—was howling mad in the ninth. After striking out twice and hitting a love tap to the pitcher the third time, Magee finally got a foothold on first by the base on balls route. There were then out and first and second occupied. It looked good for the Quakers. Dolan was ordered to bunt. As he whiffed at the ball Myers legged it in to get the signaled tap, while Sweeney slipped over to center first. Dolan missed. Quick as a flash Whaling whipped the ball to Sweeney, whom Magee had overlooked, and Sherwood was nipped off first base, disgusted.

BILL JAMES had to fight through tough going with Brennan, the southpaw working for the Phillies, just as he did when "Lefty" Allen fought him last week. Until the ninth no Pilgrims passed second base and only three went that far. After four consecutive batsmen had fanned in the eighth and ninth and the game looked lost, despite James' excellent work, Myers singled, Sweeney doubled and Myers scored on a high bounding out to shortstop from the bat of Bill Rariden, who pinch-hit for Titus—Rariden, the same pinch hitter who won James' previous game when called upon for similar service. Myers should have scored from first on Sweeney's double, but, like Lot's wife, he pulled up to "rubber" passing second, and his impulsiveness compelled him to stop at third.

MYERS squared himself by driving in the winning run. In the eleventh Manarville singled, took second on Chpron's pour throw to the infield and third on Connelly's sacrifice. With two foul strikes on Myers, the lanky first-sacker lounged the ball to far left field for what should have been a double, scoring the "rabbit" with the needful.

PLAN OUTDOOR BIKE TRACK AT FORMER HOME OF RED SOX

Outdoor bicycle racing will be held in this city for the first time, if the plans of the present promoters materialize. They plan to lay the track on the old American League grounds on Huntington avenue.

The men behind the movement are the best known bicycle men in this country, J. C. Chapman and Nat Butler, the old rider, who conducted the Revere track last year, are said to be heading the movement. Chapman promoted the big six-day race in New York last Winter and also the six-day race at the Boston Arena.

GALLANT MAY MEET RIVERS AT ATLAS A. A.

By JACK CONWAY.

FLUSHED with his victory over Battling Nelson, Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea is looking for new worlds to conquer. The little Frenchman says that nothing would please him better than a bout with Joe Rivers, the sensational Coast lightweight, who is considered the logical opponent for Champion Willie Ritchie.

In discussing Gallant's plans today his manager, Alex McLean, said:

"Gallant is open to meet any lightweight in the country. We would prefer to do business with Joe Rivers. He is a great performer, but I am sure that "Gilt" would do well against him.

"Some people have claimed that my protege does not know a great deal about the fine arts of the boxing game. That was one of the chief reasons why I had Gallant box Nelson Tuesday night, instead of merely slugging with him."

It would not surprise me a great deal if Rivers and Gallant were matched to clash at the Atlas A. A. within two or three weeks. Rivers is in the East and would probably be glad to perform in this city.

* * *

JOE BAGAN, who defeated Jimmy Greenwood of New Bedford so decisively at the Arena Tuesday evening, will journey to Lawrence tonight, where he will clash with Mickey Devine in a twelve-round bout at the Unity Club. Eagan has done some rattling good work in the ring lately and is a big favorite with Lawrence "fans" as a result of his recent victory over "Young" McDonough. Roddie McDonald of St. John, N. B., will meet Terry O'Rourke in the semi-final whirl of eight rounds.

WALTER JOHNSON HERE WITH SENATORS

STAR PITCHER OUT TO BREAK ALL MAJOR LEAGUE RECORDS

By L. R. MURDOCH

Walter Johnson's in town.

He came over from Philadelphia today to see if there was anything around here worth carrying away. Governor Foss locked up the State House, Sheriff Quinn was advised to put bars on the inside of his Home for the Unwary, and Johnny Fitzgerald is understood to have urged Dick Field by wireless to chain down City Hall.

With Johnson came a score of young men who were pointed out on the street as "The Terrible Swede's" chorus of alibis. These alibis are to be burned at the stake in Washington if Johnson fails to win the American League pennant. For, of course, the alibis will be IT.

Then Comes THE BIG NOISE.

Nine of these alibis will play a game of ball with the champions of the world this afternoon. They will play another game tomorrow afternoon in the same place. But on Saturday or Monday — these preliminaries being disposed of— THE BIG NOISE himself will gather our young champs together over in the Fenway, and, while the alibis look on, will show what a real, rip-roaring Bulgarian annihilation looks like at close range.

Just before setting sail for Boston, Johnson landed Philadelphia. We have heard it said by various writers of baseball events that Cornelius McGillicuddy has a rattling good ball club over there which contains some of the greatest hitsticks boys in baseball—J. Franklin Baker, Edwin Collins and the rest of them fellers. Personally conducted reports with our own Red Sox as conductors have seemed to verify these reports. In fact, we have been led to believe that these young men believe, and seem a bit justified in the opinion, that they may win this year's confalon.

Walter Johnson doesn't think so. He saw 'em yesterday from a distance of sixty feet and six inches, the same being the official measurement between the place where he stood and the place where they stood. For nine innings, Johnson says, he stood at that point and hurled a baseball at them. On the contrary, they declare that he did NOT hurl a baseball at them. They didn't see any baseball. On cross-examination they admit that they did see a streak of lightning and hear a funny noise—something like this: Z-I-N-G!—ever and anon.

Here's the Evidence.

The newspaper men who saw the affair quote the following as evidence that Johnson did what he said he did:

	R.	H.	E.
Washington.. 00000002—2	6	2
Philadelphia. 00000000—0	4	2

Pitching—for that was what Johnson was doing—against Johnson was our old friend Eddie Plank. We all know Eddie is some pitcher of baseball. The newspaper men tell us that Eddie pitched a mighty game yesterday, that he struck out a dozen Senators, that he held them scoreless for eight innings, that, in fact, his performance was marvelous. Yet there is no getting around the score quoted above. Johnson won!

We feel that, under the circumstances, it is worth while to go back and see what else this fellow Johnson has been doing this year. Just so as to be prepared for him, you know. Upon examination of the records, we discover that he has pitched four American League games, each of nine innings. We learn that in the first inning of the first game, a set of misplays gave his adversaries one run. But IN THE SUCCEEDING THIRTY-FIVE INNINGS NOT A SINGLE SCORE HAS BEEN MADE OFF WALTER JOHNSON.

They tell us—the alibis do—that the run afore mentioned is the only one that has been made when Johnson pitched during the past fifty-five innings, including the exhibition games he played before the official season opened.

In the thirty-six innings Johnson has pitched his opponents to one unearned run, he has vanquished in turn the Yankees twice, the Red Sox once and the Athletics once.

Verily, after studying the batting habits of those vanquished, we feel called upon to congratulate Walter Johnson. We think he is quite a pitcher, in fact, a perfectly good pitcher. We think he is worth watching.

To prove the truth of what we have said, we submit as evidence the following summaries of Johnson's games this season:

April 10—	R.	H.	E.
Washington	2	6	1
New York	1	8	1
April 19—
Washington	3	8	1
New York	0	5	4
April 23—
Washington	6	12	0
Boston	0	2	0
April 30—
Washington	2	6	2
Athletics	0	4	3

*This run, scored through an error, was made in the first inning. Johnson therefore, has pitched twenty-six consecutive innings without permitting a run. Not one run has been earned off him.

The Sox Won, Too.

Incidental to the above, it is remarked, in passing, that the Red Sox came home, too, today a little bit higher in the standing than they were when they went away. They beat the Yankees yesterday, 8 to 1. Hugh Bedient pitched and showed that he is getting to be the Hugh Bedient of 1912. Also, Forrest Cady stepped back into the game, his term of punishment for his oversight at third base in that lamented game with the Athletics having ended. Cady was real good yesterday and it looks like he will be hereafter. So he is forgiven.

BUFFALO AWARDED PROTESTED GAME WITH BALTIMORE

NEW YORK, May 1.—President Barrow of the International League has awarded the protested Buffalo-Baltimore game, played at Baltimore April 28, to Buffalo by a score of 8 to 7. The Buffalo club had protested the game because of the umpire's refusal to allow a run to score, when a wild throw by Pitcher Roth hit the grandstand. Upon investigation after the game, says President Barrow, it was shown that the grandstand in Baltimore is considerably less than ninety feet from the home plate.

M'CARTY BEATS MORAN EASILY IN GOTHAM GO

NEW YORK, May 1.—Luther McCarty, white heavyweight champion, outpointed Frank Moran of Pittsburgh in eight out of the ten rounds at the St. Nicholas A. C. He won by a wide margin, and had Moran groggy in the last chapter, but was unable to put over the knockout punch. Neither man scored a knockdown from the first bell to the last.

It was an interesting fight but not a great battle. McCarty showed improvement in boxing over his bouts with Jess Willard and Jim Stewart, but did not appear to have the real wallop. His punches stung and cut and that was all.

McCarty fairly smothered Moran with straight lefts to the face and right crosses. His best punches were straight lefts to the face.

PILGRIMS OPEN AT BROOKLYN

By RILEY.

Having proudly broken away from the two victories' class, which is now monopolized by the Reds and the Yankees, the Pilgrims are in Brooklyn today. For many a year previous to this Spring the Pilgrims and Dodgers were great Bittle chums together down in the cellar where nobody bothered them. The Dodgers, having hired a couple of pitchers to help "Nap" Rucker, and a new ball yard to play in, are acting like they had taken a "shot" of ginger, and have quit their old evil associations.

These Dodgers have already hung it on the Giants three times, and are right up there where the going is good. They have left their old boyhood companions from Boston in the lurch.

The Bostonians, however, will try to take a fall out of them in the next four days. These Boston fellows are not so much to be despised, at that. They are in seventh place, with Joe Tinker down below, looking up at them

Stallings' ball club went to Brooklyn feeling quite peppery themselves, after having broken even with the "fruitless wonders," who were trimmed in a 2 to 1 pitching duel at South End Park yesterday. Billy James, the boy wonder from Seattle, has given the Bostonians something new to hope for. He has won two of three games he has pitched, and two of the three games his team is credited with in the percentage column.

The smart ball game which James and his followers won yesterday sent them to Brooklyn in good humor. They had pulled out of some tight places and come out on top.

Within the Law

By MARVIN DANA from the Play of BAYARD VEILLER

PART I.

[illegible] that made an individual appeal in [illegible] was indistinct. She had been reared in a criminal family, which, as we [illegible] long ago, she had lost track of her father, her mother she had never known. Her one relation was a brother of high standing as a pickpocket [illegible] on account of her success in stealing men on to make fools of them. [illegible] or to their everlasting regret afterward day in the fast East, in spite of all the gross irregularities of her life she remained chaste. She deserves credit for such restraint, since it was a matter purely of temperament [illegible]

The girl saw in Mary Turner the possessor of a lucrative personality that [illegible] in much financial profit in the devious ways of which she was a mistress. With the frankness characteristic of her she proceeded to make bowling pictures of a future shared to the undoing of ardent and [illegible] youths. Mary [illegible] her listened with curiosity, but she was in no wise moved to follow such a life even though it did not necessitate the telling worse than a fraudulent playing at love, without physical degradation. So, she steadfastly continued her refusals, to the great astonishment of Aggie, who a trade could not understand in the least, even while she believed the other's declaration of innocence of the crime for which she was serving a sentence. But, for her own part, such innocence had nothing to do with the matter. Where, indeed, could be the harm in making some old miner pay a round price for his folly? And always, in response to every argument, Mary shook her head in negation. She would live straight.

Mary Hounded

Then, the heavy hours of Aggie would drive down a little, and the ugly face would harden.

"You will find that you are up against a hell of a fruit," she would declare, brutally.

Mary found the profane prophecy true. Back in New York, she experienced a poverty more ravaging than any she had known in those five long years of her working in the store. She had been absolutely penniless for two days, and without food through the gnawing hours, when she at last found employment of the humblest in a milliner's shop. Followed a blessed interval in which she worked continuously, happy over the meager stipend since it served to give her shelter and food honestly earned.

But the ways of the police are not always those of ordinary decency. In due time, an officer informed Mary's employer concerning the fact of her record as a convict, and thereupon she was at once discharged. The unfortunate victim of the [illegible] knew not where to [illegible] then. Yet, her spirit triumphed, and again she preserved in that resolve to live straight. Finally, after a second time, she secured a cheap position in a [illegible] shop—only to be arrested again by the police, so that she speedily lost the place.

Nevertheless, indomitable in her purpose, she maintained the struggle. A third time she obtained work, and there, after a little, she told her employer, a candy manufacturer in a small way, the truth of her having been in prison. The man had a kindly disposition, in addition, he ran little risk in the matter, so he allowed her to remain. When, presently, the police called his attention to the girl's criminal record, he paid no heed to their advice against retaining her services. But such action on his part offended the greatness of the law's dignity. The police brought pressure to bear on the man. They even called in the assistance of Edward Glider himself, who obligingly wrote a letter—a second letter to the girl's employer. For the sake of his own interests, though unwillingly enough, he dismissed Mary from his service.

Thought of River

It was then that despair did come upon the girl. She had tried with all the strength of her to live straight. Yet, despite her innocence, the world would not let her live according to her own conscience. It demanded that she be the criminal it had branded her—if she were to live at all. So, it was hopeless! For she would not turn to evil, and without such turning she could not live. She still walked the streets, fruitlessly seeking some place; but her heart was gone from the quest. Slowly she was sunken in an apathy that saved her from the worst pangs of misery. She [illegible] suffered so much, poignantly, that at last her emotions had grown sluggish. She did not mind much even when her tiny hoard of money was gone, and she roamed the city, starving * * * Once an hour when she thought of the river, and was glad!

Mary remembered, with a wan smile, how, long ago, she had thought with nauseated horror of suicide, unable to imagine any trouble sufficient to drive one to death as the only relief. Now, however, the thing was simple to her. Since there was nothing else, she must turn to that—to death. Indeed, it was so very simple, so final, and so easy, after as-sides she had endured, that she marveled over her own folly in having sought such escape before * * * Even with the first wild frenzy, she had unconsciously bent her steps westward toward the North River. Now, she quickened her pace, anxious for the change that should set the term to sorrow. In her unsalted brain was no flicker of thought as to whatever might succeed to her afterward. Her sole guide was that compelling passion for peace long since with unbreakable pressure. Nothing else mattered—not in the least!

So, she came through to the end of the stretch of ill-lighted streets, crossed some railroad tracks to a pier, over which she hurried to the far end, where it projected out to the fierce currents of the Hudson. There, without giving herself a moment's pause for reflection or hesitation, she leaped out as far as her strength permitted into the cold of the water * * * But, in that final second, natural terror in the face of death overcame the lethargy of despair—a shriek burst from her lips.

Cassidy Urges Reorganization of State Health Board

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The State Board of Health was both attacked and defended at a hearing before the Ways and Means Committee yesterday, upon a bill to put the power of appointing inspectors of health in the hands of the Governor and his council.

The charges against the board were:

1. That it was amenable to the influence of powerful politicians.

2. That the power of the board was exercised almost entirely by the assistant secretary, Dr. William C. Hanson.

3. That Dr Hanson on one occasion "called off" an inspector from enforcing the law.

That politics dictated the appointments of the board.

These charges were denied in detail, by Dr. Mark W. Richardson, secretary of the board, and by Dr Hanson, the assistant secretary.

Today I can only touch on the salient points of the hearing. It would be impossible to recite all the evidence given, for the hearing lasted six hours.

Representative Hart of Lynn began the attack on the bill. Senator Clark seconded Representative Hart. Representative Bradstreet also favored the bill.

Representative Michael A. Hone berry of Worcester urged that the bill should pass. He cited the case of Dr Melvin G. Overlock, inspector in charge of the Worcester district. Dr Overlock was removed, it is said, by the board last July, and as soon as his successor is confirmed, will go out of office.

Charges of Politics.

"It was politics brought that about," Representative Honeberry charged. "There were persons who had a grudge against Dr Overlock because ten years ago he exposed conditions in the Worcester City Hospital, as a result of which the superintendent of the hospital served a term in prison.

Frank B. Hall, secretary of the Consumptives' Home in Worcester said:

"I charge the State Board of Health with playing politics in its appointments. Dr. Overlock should have been reappointed. He has inaugurated work against tuberculosis up there as a result of which he was appointed by President Roosevelt, chairman of the national committee on health; he was asked to lecture before Yale students by Professor Irving Fisher; Mayor Logan of Worcester paid him the highest tribute; the Boston Chamber of Commerce has endorsed his work. The State Board of Health discharges him. The charge is close to board that discharges a man like this is incompetent—or worse."

In answer to a question, Mr Hall said:

"Dr. Hanson, the assistant secretary, makes all appointments, beyond any question."

Ex-Representative John H. Coggswell of Lynn said:

"I have found the board known little or nothing about conditions in some of our factories. I know of one case where Dr. Hanson went into a shoe factory in Lynn, examined the wheels which threw dust into the throats of the workers and sent hundreds of men to the tuberculosis sanitarium or to the grave.

"Dr. Hanson then ordered Dr. Voss, the inspector, not to enforce the law against this factory.

Scores Lynn Conditions.

"Hiram F. Mills, a member of the board, is consulting engineer for big corporations on the Merrimac river.

For forty years, the State has been trying to end the pollution of that water—and it hasn't been done yet.

John J. Griffin, secretary of the Central Labor Union of Lynn said:

"Last July, the inspection districts were changed, and Dr. Voss, formerly in charge of Lynn, was put out of a job. There hasn't been a factory inspection in Lynn since, to my knowledge. Last week I went into a shop and saw men working, covered with the poisonous dust that fills the air."

M. F. Ward of the Lynn Board of Health praised the work of Dr. Voss and said conditions had become worse since his removal. Joseph Condeau of the Lynn Heel Workers' Union, said:

"Since last July, when Dr. Voss was put out, I do not believe there has been any inspection, and conditions are fifty per cent worse than they were then.

"Dr. Voss has told me that the board, through Dr. Hanson, ordered him not to prosecute one case down there, and also notified his order that certain wheels be equipped with blowers to protect the workers from the dust."

Dr. J. William Voss, formerly inspector of health in Lynn said:

"I attempted to correct the dust evil in Lynn factories, and on one occasion, showed by Hanson a letter I had written on the subject to Mr. Cordeau. Dr Hanson said it and said:

"'We'll give these labor unions no recognition at all. Don't pay too much attention to that dust question.'

"Hanson Runs Board."

"My first trouble with Dr Hanson came when I ordered button fastening machines in the factories employed with blowers. He entered the factories, and then ordered me to let them go without blowers. In a recent bulletin written by him he admits that these machines should be provided by blowers, to guard the health of the workers.

"I was unable to enforce the law, because of Dr Hanson's attitude.

"Dr Hanson runs the board. Members of the board have told me that on this question of new districts and new inspectors, they acted on his recommendation. Dr. Hanson is noted for his insolence—and he is a contrast to Dr Harrington, the former secretary, who realized that he was a public servant.

"I once spoke to Dr Hanson about this dust matter, and pointed out to him that the law gives inspectors the power to decide when machines should be covered. He answered: 'I am the law; you take orders from me.'"

Dr. Mark W. Richardson, secretary of the board, testified. He said the board has a reputation throughout the world for effective work for the public health. He said that although the board meets but once a month, Dr. Woleott and Dr. Mills are in close touch with the work in the office daily.

"On this measure," he added, "I believe that if the board is held responsible for its work it must have power to appoint and remove its inspectors."

"We did decrease the number of inspectors, because the new Department of Legislative Research recommended it. Inspection begins June 1.

Dr. Overlock Heard.

"It is ridiculous to say that Dr. Hanson runs the board. He is in charge of the detail work, and the re-districting was done on his recommendation. The appointments were not on his recommendation, as Dr. Wolcott and myself are in close touch with the inspectors."

Dr. Melvin G. Overlock of Worcester said:

"Up till the last few months the inspectors of health have had to help their own pay. They have received no instructions, or advice, directly from the members of the board. I have urged that Dr Wolcott or Dr. Richardson attend our meetings, but they have not done so.

Dr. Hanson, the assistant secretary, testified. He said he was in charge of the detail work. He said that on complaint of a man interested in the prevention of tuberculosis he had investigated Dr. Overlock's work on this subject in Worcester. "Many of the statements as to what Dr. Overlock had done I found overdrawn," he said.

Frank B. Hall asked Dr. Hanson to give the name of the person who had complained to Dr. Overlock. Dr. Hanson asked:

"Am I obliged to tell?"

The chairman of the committee said he was not obliged to answer. Two members of the committee repeated the question. Dr. Hanson said:

Casadyy for Reorganization.

Dr. Overlock charged Dr. Hanson with having sent to the Worcester Telegram a copy of the board's bulletin attacking Dr. Overlock's work, and urging the Telegram to print the report. Dr. Overlock said the Telegram never printed the bulletin. Dr. Hanson's report, Dr. Lamson's statements, and all sensational statements attributed to Hanson by Dr. Hanson's report, Dr. Lamson's and Dr. Hanson's charges also offered to look up the statements of doubtful accuracy proof.

Dr Hanson denied that he had made the remark about labor unions.

I have endeavored to present this account of the hearing accurately, in so far as it is possible in this space. Every one of you can draw his or her own conclusions. Mine are these:

1. That the members of the Board of Health are not sufficiently in touch with their work.

2. That Secretary Richardson is not sufficiently in touch with his work.

3. That the only way to effect any permanent improvement is to establish a board like members of which are paid salaries, and salaries large enough so that they will give all their time and attention to the work.

I hope that a reorganization of the State Board will be effected.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

A Loyal D. A. R.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON always looks on the bright side. It is a good habit for a man of family to cultivate, or else—but why digress?

Lysander John has the bright side habit in such perfect development that if he had preacher kin he could find pleasure in bragging that when the preacher kin preaches they have to put chairs in the aisles.

His wife is an enthusiastic member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. When she added D. A. R. receptions and D. A. R. meetings and D. A. R. excursions to club, society, home missionary and church work, he ate his cold potatoes without complaint, remembering that he had read somewhere cold meals are better for the stomach than hot. He cultivated the bright side habit so assiduously that he became a veritable Little Ray of Sunshine in a rainy day. He even ventured to inquire with some interest one evening while eating his cold meat what was the good of the order. He wanted to impress his wife with his lack of seasonment, but, alas, the question suggested skepticism, ignorance and doubt and aroused her to spirited defense.

"What is the good of it?" she exclaimed. "Isn't it just like a man to ask such a foolish question?

"The good we do is boundless." In her wrath she took a quick breath that snapped her corset string. "It is boundless," she repeated, snapping another. "I'll recall one noble deed out of ten hundred equally noble.

"Last Summer we got trace of a man who fought in the Revolutionary War, and who was buried in a little country graveyard in western Nebraska. His poor grave was all sunk in and neglected."

Here she stopped to wipe away a sympathetic tear. "Do you know what we did? We gave a fair that lasted three days and raised $58.5 cents. Boxes of tuberoses to be sent by express and laid on that poor sunken, neglected grave!

"Oh, it is a beautiful thought that after all these weary years that poor dead man's grave was remembered at last! Think what such a tribute means to posterity! Look at its influence on patriotism! Think what it means to HIM!"

Here the picture of a wreath lying on that poor man's grave after so many flowered years caused such emotion that she broke more corset strings, and had to leave the room for repairs.

Suffragists of the World

Elizabeth Freeman and the English Militants

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

ALMOST daily from across the water there comes the story of a new move in the campaign of destruction planned by the militant suffragists.

The foes of suffrage use militancy as a strong argument against "Votes for Women." The Bishop of Lincoln, although himself a suffragist, has expressed himself against the militant movement: "Who take the sword shall perish by the sword."

So the questions naturally arise: What real cause is there for militancy? What

SUFFRAGISTSOF EAST INDIA.

This picture shows the Indian Empire contingent of suffragists as they appeared at the coronation ceremonies. Few persons, except those who have made the question of woman suffrage a study, are aware that this great question is so far-reaching, even extending into the Punjab district. That young girls, as well as women of maturer age, are vitally interested in the fight for better conditions is strikingly shown by the appearance of the characters in the picture.

influence has it on the world's suffrage movement?

For the answer to these questions I went to Elizabeth Freeman, an American girl, who has recently returned from six years spent in England, and who was there swept into the great cause of suffrage and into the forefront of the militant movement.

Is Ready to Die

"The woman militant is herself ready to perish for the cause—but she respects human life since she has the mother instinct to save, not to destroy," said Miss Freeman.

"The militant attitude of mind is forced on women—take my case, for example: One night I was on my way to meet some friends after the theatre. As my bus went through Parliament square I looked down from the top and saw a big policeman striking a little woman. I got down and protested. He said, 'You come along o' me, Missie.' 'Gladly,' said I, meaning to bear witness to his brutality—I did not know I had been arrested. But I spent ten days in Holloway Prison—amidst the most frightful conditions— and in a state of mental apathy. "Assault and obstruction' was the charge—you see that officer had been subduing a suffragist.

"This whole movement seems to rouse the brute in Englishmen. But they confess they are beaten by their fear of letting the suffragists starve themselves to death in jail or go free. And 'forcible feeding' is horrible. It tears and tears at the throat beyond hope of recovery. But the treatment to which gentlewomen are subjected before they are dragged off to jail is absolutely repellent.

A Terrible Experience

"Let me tell you of one riot I went through. November 18, 1910, was known as Black Friday—not such a bloodshed marked that day in Parliament square. But on the following Tuesday when we found that Parliament had risen without keeping its promise to present our bill, we marched peacefully to the side entrances in Downing street.

"Now Downing street is a little blind alley less than a block long, with the fence of St. James Park marking its end.

"We reached the head of the street and suddenly the police arrived. We were crushed and driven forward—forward against the iron palings of the park—on and on against an impassable barrier so that at last we became like cattle milling around and around in dazed horror.

"Stones as big as a man's fist hurtled through the air—they found their mark, too. One woman was thrown to the ground again and again, so that her chest bone was broken and mangled; and a man who tried to stop her tormentors was arrested for his pains.

"I saw a burly policeman with his hands at Mrs. Pankhurst's throat—throttling her and forcing her head backward until I fancied that I could hear her spine crack. In a nightmare of horror, in which I was not myself but only a spirit that must save that gray head from torture, I forced my hand through the bandage that is worn around the London policeman's forehead in place of office, and tried to twist his hand away. With a quick jerk of his arm, he caught my fingers in that bandage as in a noose, and twisted it once and yet again so my strained muscles ached in torture.

"Another officer arrested me. He took my arm and dragged me along. 'I'll go, officer, but won't you take the other arm?' I moaned. He laughed and gave the aching arm another twist.

"'Good-bye, Lady Betty,' called someone using my nickname—'Lady Betty flies across the Water.'" I was led out of the street and released. "They do not like to arrest women of title!

She Went Back

"Of course I went right back, and just as I got into that pit of horror again, someone drove an automobile in—bruising and knocking down the women in its way—but killing no one.

"Two days later Mrs. Pankhurst's sister died of the injuries she had received that day—but the press gave it only two lines notice.

"The censorship of the British press does inestimable harm to the cause. It never reports how we fill Albert Hall—with its seating capacity of 18,000—again and again. It does not tell how thinking men are coming to see the righteousness of our cause. It only tells of our 'outrages.'

Sometimes the press calls us hysterics —fanatics—self made martyrs. Of course a martyr is 'self-made'—he chooses to suffer for a righteous cause. And it is only for a cause that suffering like ours can be endured. Some American newspaper women went over for the prison experience. After three days they paid their fines and got out.

"The English women did not become militant until 'THE SWORD' WAS FORCED UPON THEM AND ALL CONSTITUTIONAL WAYS AND MEANS FAILED. They were arrested for street speaking and for parading; when they went on their constitutional right to petition the King or his proxy—they were arrested.

"But the American Constitution allows for ever better constitutional procedure. If we petition Legislatures here, we receive courtesy—all we care for, and more than we expect from politicians.

"WE NEED NOT BE MILITANT—WE NEED ONLY FEEL DEEPLY ENOUGH THERE IN AMERICA, AND WE WILL GET THE SUFFRAGE."

ASLEEP AT DINNER

PRINCE LEOPOLD, the recently deposed Regent of Bavaria, some weeks before his fatal illness fell asleep at a dinner party immediately after the first course. His guests were restrained by etiquette from waking him, but continued their conversation in a low tone. The servants did not dare to continue serving the dinner.

The Prince soon commenced to snore, and slept on for two hours, during which time no one allowed himself to leave his place. The guests sat famished in the same room with a marvellously appetized dinner. Finally Prince Leopold awoke. He took a hurried glance around the table and saw only a number of perfectly correct faces successfully pretending to have noticed nothing. Persuaded that his slight lapse had passed completely unremarked, he said quietly, "Now let us go and take coffee." The guests rose accordingly and proceeded to the drawing room. Coffee was served with cordials, liqueurs, cigars. The Prince, thoroughly refreshed by his unbroken sleep, had a good deal of excellent conversation, which lasted till midnight. The party then broke up, and the guests departed, famished with hunger.

Helen Finds That Alice Is Carrying on a Clandestine Correspondence

"O H, where are the good old sons? I can't cut with these!"

Helen threw down her sewing and again searched through her work basket.

"What in the Sam Hill do you want?" growled Warren, as she moved the reading lamp and raised up his papers to look on the table.

"The scissors—we've only one pair that'll cut. Oh, maybe Alice has taken them in her room."

Alice was writing—a voluminous letter, from the pains of closely written note paper. She looked up with a slight frown as Helen entered.

"Dear," as she thoughtfully threaded a needle, "I don't know what to think about all the letters Alice writes. Every day since she came she's spent hours writing to some one."

"Well, what of it?" snapped Warren. "What business is it of ours how many letters she writes?"

It's Only to One Person

"But it's only to one person! It isn't as if she were writing home or to a lot of school girls—she's writing to some man!"

"How do you know it's a man?"

"Why, no girl is going to write a twenty-page letter to another girl, and write one every day! And, besides, there's a man's picture in her locket—I saw her looking at it yesterday. And somehow I feel it's somebody her folks don't approve of or don't know anything about."

"Piddlesticks! You're always imagining something. Why shouldn't a girl of eighteen write to a man if she wants to?"

"If her mother knows it—yes, but I feel that Aunt Emma doesn't know this," gurgled Helen. "And that picture in her locket—it isn't anyone of her own age—it's a man of thirty-five or forty. And I don't like his face, but it's just the type that would attract a young girl."

Things Were Not Right

Intuitively she knew that things were not right, and the fact that Alice was here under their protection gave her a haunting sense of responsibility.

The next day the noon delivery brought Helen a letter from Alice's mother. Alice was disposing her hair in the girls' room, and Helen called to her cheerily as she opened it:

"Better hurry up! Here's a letter from your mother."

But as soon as she glanced at the letter, she realized it was one that Alice could not see.

Dayton, O., April 20, 1913.

Dear Helen—

You are already doing so much for Alice and for me in letting her visit you at this time, that I hesitate to worry you further. But I have just found that Alice has been both disobeying and deceiving me.

I hardly know how to write you about this, as it is a difficult thing for any mother to write, but now that Alice is with you, I feel that you must know, so you can prevent any further trouble.

Last Fall she met somewhere a man who travels for a Cincinnati motor car company. He called to see her several times at the house, but as he was much older and not at all the type of man I would wish Alice to know, we discouraged and then forbade his visits.

Then I found she was writing him. We stopped this—or thought we did. But when I received her letter yesterday—on the back of one of the sheets she had begun a letter to him. It was only a few lines, and she had written to me on the other side without noticing it.

Now we are afraid that this man, knowing she is in Boston, will go there to see her. He is capable of doing anything. So I am writing to beg you not to let her see him, under any circumstances, and above all, not to let her go out alone.

As I know this is a great responsibility to force upon you, we are going to have her come back the first of the month. I will write you again tomorrow, but I want to mail this now, so you will get it as quickly as possible.

I thought our flooded, ruined home was enough trouble, but now it seems that we must meet this also.

Anxiously,

YOUR AUNT EMMA.

"A letter from mamma?" asked Alice, coming in, shaking her wet hair over her towel-covered shoulders.

A Business Letter

"But it's only a business letter," faltered Helen. "Nothing that would interest you."

"A business letter?" her voice was frankly unbelieving. "What business could mother write about that I couldn't see?"

"Well, it's a personal letter, then—one that I don't wish to show you," and Helen turned away with an air of finality.

Even in an old kimono with wet, stringing hair, Alice was strikingly pretty. And now when she followed Helen, and with flashing eyes, faced her defiantly, Helen was struck anew with her beauty.

"I know what mother wrote you," excitedly. "I know why you won't let me see that letter! She wrote about Mr. Hampton! She's afraid I'm waiting to hear that I'll see him—don't that it? Oh, you needn't answer. I know it is."

"Yes, that's what she has written about." Helen looked at her steadily. "And don't you think, Alice, that your people have had enough trouble without you causing them this extra worry?"

"Then why don't they let me alone? I'm eighteen—I'm old enough to know what I'm doing. Why shouldn't I write to Mr. Hampton—and see him, too, if I want to?"

Mother Would Object

"Alice, I don't know anything about this man but I do know that your mother wouldn't object to your seeing him without some good reason."

"Oh, mother!" with an impatient shrug, "what does she know about Mr. Hampton? Just because he's a little older than I? And he's so much more interesting and clever than any of those boys you all know. Why I've always said I couldn't care for a man who wasn't a lot older. And the fact that he's divorced—I don't see what that's got to do with it? Lots of people have been married unhappily and it isn't their fault."

"Divorced! Oh, Alice, he ISN'T divorced!"

"Well, is there anything disgraceful about that? Aren't lots of people divorced nice people, too? He's told me how unhappy he was with his wife—how they were never congenial. Her tastes and interests were so different—they'd nothing in common. Oh, his life has been so sad! You can tell that by his eyes. The most wonderful dark eyes! And he's so distinguished looking, and has the most glorious voice!"

Helen sank into a chair with a helpless gasp of dismay.

How Foolish

"I suppose it's useless for me to try to tell you how foolish you are. Can't you see no man of any principle would talk to a young girl about his divorced wife? Why, everything you say about him shows—"

"Cousin Helen, I happen to love him, and I'm engaged to marry him, so you will please not say anything more!"

"Then I must say this, Alice, that while you're here you are not to write him another letter. I can't have the responsibility. Your mother's to send for you the first of the month, then she can handle the situation, but while you stay here—you must not write him again."

"And how are you going to keep me from writing him?"

"If you don't respect my request—I shall have to ask Warren to see that you do."

"Warren!" sniffed Alice. "Do you think I'm afraid of him? Because he's always lording it over you doesn't mean he can lord it over everybody. I don't care if he IS my cousin. I think he's about as selfish and overbearing as any one I ever met. And since you feel so free to say things against Mr. Hampton, I'll let you know that if I marry him he'll be a lot kinder to me than Warren's ever been to you!"

And before Helen could recover from her amazed indignation Alice had flounced into her own room, slammed the door and locked it.

KANSAS WOMAN WHO SUFFERED

From Headache, Backache, Dizziness and Nervousness, Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lawrence, Kans.—"A year ago I was suffering from a number of ailments. I always had pain and was irregular. During the delay I suffered a great deal with headache, backache, dizziness, feverish spells, nervousness and bloating. I had been married nearly three years. took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I feel better than I have for years. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all who suffer as I did."—MRS. M. ZEUNER, 1045 New Jersey Street, Lawrence, Kansas.

Montana Woman's Case.

Burns, Mont.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me of awful backache which I had suffered with for months. I was so weak I could hardly do my work and my head and eyes ached all the time. Your Compound helped me in many ways and is a great strengthener. I always recommend it to my friends and tell them what a grand medicine it is for women. You may use my name for the good of others."—MRS. JOHN FRANCIS, Burns, Montana.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as those above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no strange—it has stood the test for years.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU MUST REFUSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am fifteen and have been keeping company with a young man of twenty-seven. He seems to be very fond of me, and he says he loves me dearly. He has given me several nice presents and has proposed to me and insists on our early marriage.

LITTLE GIRL.

YOU are only a child, and love, courtship and marriage are not for children. If this man were sensible and kind, he would not urge an early marriage for you. Please give him up.

THEY ARE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am fifteen and have been keeping company with a young man of twenty-seven. I like him very much and he says he loves me dearly and insists upon an early marriage. He has given me several nice presents and writes to me very often. My parents say I am too young.

BROWNEY.

YOU are at least five years too young. Be guided by them in this matter, and let the young man go.

YOUR FAMILY IS RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I recently met a ball player from an out-of-town league on the street, and fell violently in love with him. He introduced himself to me, and we had a soda together. Would you advise me to continue the acquaintance? My family object because he is a ball player, but I do not believe a man's profession should interfere with two people's life's happiness, do you?

LOVESICK.

IT is not the man's profession that is against him, but the manner in which you met him.

You must drop his acquaintance before your happiness is really involved.

NO SERIOUS OFFENCE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen years of age and last week I was invited to a party to which I was requested to bring a young man. I invited a young man whom I know to be very respectable and polite, but I had known him a very little time, and, at that, only to talk to. Now, what I want to know is if it was right to invite him.

ANXIOUS.

YOU had been introduced and you knew him to be honorable. Under the circumstances, you did no great wrong. The mistake, if there was any, lies in the custom of asking a girl of sixteen to bust up a boy escort.

FIVE VOLUME CYCLOPEDIA CHANCE TODAY

Readers will have another chance to-morrow to take advantage of the AMERICAN'S great book bargain. Everybody's Cyclopedia is offered for $1.98 and one coupon.

The set is complete in five volumes bound in beautiful English cloth, and the regular selling price is $12 per set. The $10.02 saved on the purchase price of this set would pay for the daily AMERICAN for three years.

This great reference work treats 35,000 subjects in all branches of knowledge. Its biological sketches include celebrities of the earliest times down to those of today. It contains a chronological history of the world from the beginning of all history down to the present. It contains educational charts which record the progress of the entire world.

Many families possess a cyclopedia of some kind. Most of them are out of date, and practically all of them are too large to handle. They are of little value for educational purposes because they are too heavy for children to use, and one must search through page after page to find the desired information.

But in Everybody's Cyclopedia you find your subject in an instant, with all the facts relating thereto, and all set forth so clearly that a child may quickly grasp the meaning. This reliable, ever-ready reference work should be in every home, even though one may have other sets.

Auto News

By B. C. KERRISON.

When the president of one of the big railroad companies reminded his thousands of employes that "Safety First" was the most important policy of the railroad, the world approved.

It is to be hoped that these two words will strongly impress every automobile driver in the country. "Safety First" is the slogan of the efficient automobile driver.

Unless a man is mentally unbalanced, he starts out with this principle firmly fixed in his mind, and a full equipment of anti-skid chains in his car. There is no reason for anyone to take chances on slippery pavements and muddy roads inasmuch as an unfailing grip on the road may always be had by equipping all tires with suitable chains.

It is much better to use the chains and arrive at your destination than to depend upon rubber shoes and wake up in the hospital.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Weakness of the Mellen issues was the feature of stock markets this morning. The New Haven sank three points to 103 at the start, and was also weak in Boston before long. Boston & Maine opened half a point higher, but when selling of New Haven in New York became heavy for the latter stock Boston & Maine lagged here. At the end of the first hour it was down to 94, 2½ below yesterday's closing price and 8 below that of Tuesday. United Fruit was then down more than 1.

Coppers were dull. Butte & Superior declined a point or more.

Prices were held well in New York during the first half of the forenoon as regards the list in general. Gains were small, but Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Northern Pacific all rose. There were no foreign markets to influence New York today.

New Haven at a New Low.

The feature of the New York market at around the opening was the decline of New Haven to 102, a new low record in that market since the closing yesterday. The shares of this road are now at the lowest price known in eight years or so. From the low the New Haven made some recovery during the first hour.

At the opening the balance of the New York list was irregular and the tone was feverish. Steel common opened ¼ higher, but soon lost its gain and sold fractionally below Wednesday's final. Among the advances were Amalgamated ½, Anaconda ⅝, Erie 1, Lehigh Valley ½, Missouri Pacific ⅛, Pennsylvania ⅛ and Reading ⅛.

Within half an hour Reading, Missouri Pacific, Lehigh Valley and Erie had lost either part or all of their gains. Union Pacific opened unchanged at 146⅞, then gained fractionally. Southern Pacific was also unchanged.

The Curb was dull.

There was no market in London.

Banks to Pay Interest to U. S.

The Wilson administration is to actively reverse the Republican policy of many years in regard to government money put in national banks. Nothing like that has ever been done by the United States treasury department. Beginning June 1, all government depositories will be charged 2 per cent. interest annually on their average monthly balances.

"There is nothing unusual in this requirement," said Secretary McAdoo. "I believe the government is entitled to this interest for the use of the public moneys, and I believe the banks holding public funds ought to pay it. That is now the present policy of the treasury, and the order was issued in accordance with that policy."

At the close of business Tuesday there was on deposit in the designated depositaries a total of $42,284,442 of public funds. In addition to this the secretary yesterday authorized a transfer to these banks of $10,000,000, the average monthly balance of these banks ranges around that aggregate of $50,000,000, the government will receive $1,000,000 a year in interest that otherwise would go into the earnings of the banks.

The New Currency Bill.

When Secretary of State Bryan returns from California he and President Wilson will begin at once to write a currency reform bill and while on the job will examine the drafts of measures submitted by Senator Owen, Representative Glass and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo. "Every effort," says a Washington dispatch, "will be made to keep away from the central bank control system and the government will be taken out of the banking business as much as possible, but there may be a central board of supervision of the banks in connection with the Treasury Department."

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market was steady at the start with spot up 2s 6d and futures unchanged.

London fortnightly statistics show that European stocks of copper on April 30, including Hamburg and Rotterdam, decreased 1,582 tons, while copper supplies afloat decreased 600, making a total decrease in the visible supply of 1,962 tons.

The output of Butte mines during April was 22,227,580 pounds of copper against 23,880,080 in March and 28,929,040 in April last year. A Butte dispatch says all the large operating companies there hold April production to a minimum and that it is understood that the Anaconda and others will pursue this policy for months to come. The mine owners do not intend to let production outrun demand.

There is little demand from consumers for the metal now. War risk has hurt buying in Europe.

During the month of April this country exported 53,624 tons of copper against 22,591 tons in the corresponding 1912 month. The increase was 19,433 tons.

Financial News in Brief.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged today at 4½ per cent. The Balkan situation is such that there is little prospect of any immediate reduction. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is now 49.20 per cent., against 49.60 last week, and compares with a decline from 49.20 to 48⅞ per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

Gross earnings of the Pennsylvania system for March were seriously affected by floods during the last nine days of the month. Unusual expenditures on account of the floods also resulted in an increase in expenses, amounting to $2,352,425 for the lines east and west of Pittsburgh. Total operating revenue was $29,588,034, a decrease of $13,160. Net operating revenue amounted to $3,660,299, a decrease of $2,305,000.

Ohio Fuel Oil Company has declared a dividend of 100 per cent.

Owing to the fact that this is Ascension Day, the Paris and Berlin bourses, as well as the London stock market, were closed.

May Day disbursements to stockholders of the biggest railroad and industrials are estimated to total $18,822,341, a decrease of $124,736 from this day last year.

Abstracts of reports showing the condition on April 4 last of 7,440 national banks, issued by the comptroller of the currency today, places the resources of these institutions at $11,081,974,883.46.

The stockholders of Gray & Davis, Incorporated, a Massachusetts corporation, have voted to increase capital from $1,250,000 to $1,750,000 by issue of 5,000 new preferred shares. Capital now consists of 7,500 commons and 10,000 preferred shares.

The United Fruit Co. has sold to Lee, Higginson & Co. $12,000,000 four-year 6 per cent. gold coupon notes, dated May 1, 1913. These notes are being offered for public subscription at 98¾ and interest.

BUSINESS MEN PROTEST UNFAIR TREATMENT TO RAILROADS OF NATION

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the AMERICAN.

The Economic Club of New York is an association of thinking men in many walks of life, who search for first-hand truth wherever it can be found. It holds frequent meetings and hears all sides. It welcomes speeches from labor representatives just as cordially as it welcomes addresses from bankers, railroad officers, industrial leaders, merchants, importers, manufacturers, university professors and unattached theorists.

The value of such an organization in these unsettled times, when problems of tremendous moment are agitating the country, when new conditions—political, financial, economic, labor—are evolving and demanding the weightiest consideration, cannot be exaggerated.

Over a thousand men more or less prominent in various spheres of activity attended a dinner of the club on Tuesday evening. The subject was "Are Our Railroads Fairly Treated?" Not one speaker, neither Banker Speyer (the president) nor any railroad president, Professor Ripley nor Railway Conductor Garretson answered in the affirmative, although a note of hope occasionally sounds through the strain of pessimism.

Once the public realizes whither the railroads are drifting, dragging the sole business of the nation with them, relief will be forthcoming, it was acknowledged. "How much must be suffered before then?" was the dominant query.

President Brown of the New York Central spoke from bitter experience when he said it has become practically impossible to sell long-time bonds, and if the railroads cannot attract private capital the alternative, he declared, is government ownership.

President Delano of the Wabash Railroad mentioned these as among the added burdens weighing down the railroads:

1—A two-cent fare law.

2—Mail pay injustices.

3—Rigid governmental regulations concerning hours of service and safety appliances.

4—Boiler inspection laws that, if enforced, would send every railroad eventually out of business.

5—Nonsensical electric headlight laws prompted by locomotive engineers financially interested in the concerns supplying them.

6—Full crew laws, inspired for purely selfish ends by certain railway employes.

President Bush of the Missouri Pacific put it thus neatly: "The price of a postage stamp added to the charge for carrying a ton twenty miles would change the whole railroad situation."

Professor William Z. Ripley of Harvard declared: "Relief must come, or the public is to be denied the transportation facilities to which it is justly entitled."

HOTEL MEN FIGHT QUINCY HOUSE FIRE

A volunteer force of hotel employes, led by proprietor Charles J. McCarthy and Manager T. J. Murphy, extinguished a fire in a tunnel on the roof of the Quincy House. When Chemical 1 arrived in response to a telephone call, the blaze was under control.

ARTIST HARLOW DIES AT DEDHAM

Louis K. Harlow, sixty-two, water color painter and etcher, is dead at his home in Dedham. An example of his best etching work is considered the illustration of Longfellow's "Daybreak."

ON TIME

(From the Boston News Bureau, April 18, 1913.)

Steady improvement is being made in promptness of their passenger traffic movement by the New England Lines, both north and south. At the South Station the time-record for the fast trains from New York is especially interesting. With the Bay State (which, by the way, enjoys the reputation for the best record of any "limited" in the United States), there has not during the current month been a minute's delay in bringing this train into the South Station. In the case of the Merchants train—the entire equipment of which is now all steel—there have been only two April delays, of one and four minutes, in its arrival at Boston.

Since February 1 tickets for the New Haven's "limited" service between Boston and New York—consisting of the Bay State, Knickerbocker and Merchants, three daily trains each way—have carried a provision for a $1 price-rebate for a delay of over 30 minutes in reaching destination. During this period, however, there have been but 10 "excess" delays, seven of which were in February, and the trains for the most part have been kept practically on time. During the present month, for instance, their delay in arrival at Boston has aggregated but 23 minutes, consisting of seven, eleven, one and four minutes respectively.

The Whirlpool of Life—It Carries Us All to the Same Spot

Slowly at First, Then More Rapidly, Then Like Lightning the Years Go.

Copyright, 1913, by American Journal Examiner

Have you read Edgar Allan Poe's wonderful description of the whirlpool? If you have not read it, get it at the public library and read it.

Then ask yourself what you would do, if you were in that whirlpool, not to stay a few seconds and then disappear, but to stay thirty, or fifty, or eighty years, and then disappear.

If you were in a whirlpool of water, of sound and of terror, such as Poe described; if you knew that in the end you must go down into that central hole, your only thought would be to behave as well as you could as you went round and round, and to prove your sympathy for the others going round with you.

Well, YOU ARE IN A WHIRLPOOL, and you are going eventually—you and all other human beings—down into that central hole that we call the grave.

Life is a whirlpool. It moves very slowly on the outside edge in babyhood.

Then it moves more rapidly, and presently, as old age comes on, the years fly by, so that we can hardly tell one from another—and at last, down we go, head first and feet up, where thousands of millions have gone before, and where thousands and thousands of millions will come after us.

As we go round and round, the circle getting narrower each time, let us do in this real whirlpool of life what we would do or think we would do if we were in the whirlpool of the ocean—play our part well, and show kindness if possible to those near us.

A picture such as that on this page appeals especially to the mind of a poet. And so we have persuaded Mr. Montague to write some verses to express the thought that fits the picture.

THE WHIRLPOOL

"Heigho!" cried Youth, "the years are long,
There's time enough for toil tomorrow;
There's time enough to mend the wrong
That lies about us—and the sorrow.
The creeping seasons come and go,
Too long they are for Youth to measure.
Why plods the grim old race so slow?
Make way! We hurry forth to pleasure."

But swifter roll the years around,
Resistless are the currents speeding
That hurry Youth to pleasure bound
Toward age and sorrow, still unheeding.
And when at last the circles bend
And close toward sure and dread disaster
Youth learns too late that in the end
Life's pace is fast enough—and faster.

JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

Atlanta and the "Mystic Shrine"

The typical and now historic "Atlanta Spirit" is well illustrated in the way the Georgia capital has prepared to capture the Imperial Council of the Mystic Shrine for 1914.

The Imperial Council of the Shriners is one of the great convention prizes of the American year. Gathering from 8,000 to 10,000 Shriners—the very flower of Masonry—it is in numbers, in quality, in spectacular splendor and in social and fraternal importance scarcely inferior to the quadrennial convention of the two great political parties.

The greater cities of the country eagerly seek the honor of entertaining these princely Masons. Before the great Council, which meets in Dallas this month, Atlanta is going to press her cordial invitation to the Shriners to be her guests in May, 1914.

Atlanta discovered that it would require $60,000, raised in advance, to assure the Council of her preparedness to entertain.

Atlanta prepared to do it. Her committees were appointed, the famous "Atlanta Spirit" was invoked to raise the required sum before sunset—in a single day.

By four o'clock on the day appointed Atlanta had raised, not $60,000, but $75,000, and was going on toward the $100,000 mark when sunset came.

The great social order of the Masons could not do better than accept the hospitality of the brilliant and historic capital of the New South. Atlanta is the Phoenix City of the Old South. It was levelled to ashes by General Sherman in 1864 and left with only 3,000 population. Thirty years later Atlanta banqueted General Sherman in splendid spirit upon the scene of his battle, in a city of 70,000, and now houses nearly 200,000 people in one of the most beautiful, brilliant and hospitable cities in all the country.

The "Atlanta Spirit" and the Atlanta men, from Henry Grady to John B. Gordon, have been great factors in the re-establishment of good feeling and the obliteration of sectional prejudice.

And Atlanta itself has more to offer in historic interests, in easy access, in splendid hotels, vivid entertainments, and in charming hospitality than any other city in the South.

Appeal to the AMERICAN from Widow of Late Vice-President of Mexico

The AMERICAN has received the following letter from Mrs. Pino Suarez, widow of the late Vice-President of Mexico killed during the late tragic events in Mexico, leaving to Mrs. Pino Suarez no other patrimony than six children:

"To all Masons:

"My beloved husband told me to address the Masons of the the world, a short time before his tragic death, telling them of his condition and to ask them help for his family. He had attained in Masonry the highest degree, the thirty-third.

"My husband had absolute faith in Masonry and his brothers. He did all possible for the greatness of Masonry, and even, in the government of Mexico, co-operating with his brother, Madero, the president, used and utilized the ideals and teachings of Masonry, putting them in practice since 1910, perhaps, the only time ever done.

"My beloved husband left me without money. A poor man he became vice-president, and poor he died. But he left a great and glorious name, as a Mason, knowing how to comply, as a Mason should.

"He left me six children, the youngest two months, the eldest fifteen years. For them, children of a good, great and noble Mason, who always complied with his duty, who worked as few for the sake of humanity, who helped to make universal Masonry great, I ask help, moral and effective help of all Masons.

"At the request of my husband who, even near death, did not lose faith in Masonry, my children and I put ourselves in your hands.

MARIA C. DE PINO SUAREZ."

(Subscriptions received by AMERICAN will be duly forwarded. All Masons as well as those who do not know anything about Masonry but do know of universal charity, may respond to this most worthy appeal.)

Spring in the City

THOUGH all around me stretches far
A wilderness of stone,
Where hoofs and wheels together beat
In endless monotone;
Though only webs of woven steel
The wires above me fling,
Yet just beyond the city walls
I know that it is Spring.

For some one dropped a daffodil
Upon the dusty street;
A golden blossom late the pride
Of gardens bright and sweet,
A little broken, faded flower,
A limp and withered thing,
With all its yellow petals bruised,
But eloquent of Spring.

Dorothy Dix Writes —ON— Reforming Others. Women Want to Change Everybody—It's Born in Them—Often a Bar to Friendship. Men Seldom Suffer from It.

By DOROTHY DIX

THE other day a cultured woman, of rather sentimental tendencies, asked me what I thought was the greatest art in the world.

"The art of letting other people alone," I answered, and then I said, and it's the least understood."

She stared and then smiled, as if she thought I intended to be funny, but I was never more deadly in earnest in my life. I have suffered, you have suffered, the whole world has groaned under a martyrdom at the hands of those who would not let us alone, but who insisted on regulating our lives according to their own notions, and without the slightest regard for any prejudices we might have in the opposite direction.

I am loath to confess it, but these well-meaning persecutors are generally women. Men are so busy trying to make both ends meet in their own business they have scant leisure to meddle in the affairs of their neighbors.

Women Are Born with an Inherent Desire to Reform

A shoe merchant may do business for twenty years next door to an insurance agent without attempting to show him how to write out a policy or to conduct his office. A woman, on the other hand, can never see anybody do anything differently from the way she does it without burning with a frantic desire to correct them and set them right.

If Mrs. A's children wear flannel she can no more help worrying over the B children having on cotton than she can help breathing. Every woman in her heart believes that she is the only human being who possesses the real secret of economy, the true religion, and an infallible gift for managing, and, being so perfectly convinced of the correctness of her point of view, it seems to her actually criminal to let you alone and permit you to do your own way instead of hers.

As a matter of fact, the passion for reforming things is inherent in the sex. We can't help it. We were born that way. In its violent and insane form it makes dear, sweet, refined and angelic girls throw themselves away on disgusting, drunken brutes, whom they marry, expecting to reform them and lift them out of the gutter into respectability.

No woman escapes the fascination of the idea entirely, and the very first thing a girl thinks of after she gets engaged is what a perfectly delightful time she is going to have reforming her husband just as soon as she gets him. Sometimes it's his politics and religion that she means to have him change, sometimes it's merely the shape of his collar, or the cut of his hair, but she's always bent on reforming something. If there could be a perfect man he would have to live and die a bachelor. There isn't a woman living whom he would interest, because there would be nothing to change about him.

Men Seldom Suffer from a Desire for Reformation

Men seldom suffer from this peculiar mania. When a man first falls in love with a girl he thinks that everything about her is absolutely perfect, and by the time he gets over it and gets a second view of her, he is too wise to undertake the job of improving her. He has found out that there is nothing mutual in a woman's idea of reform, and that she most emphatically objects to the process being tried on her, and he lets her alone.

Women seldom learn that, and so we are continually treated to the spectacle of wives who have waged an unsuccessful war against their husband's smoking for twenty years and who are still hammering away at the same reform, instead of letting him smoke in peace. It is doubtful if tobacco is harmful. Certainly it can't be as bad morally, physically or mentally as a perpetual argument on the subject. Only fancy what we should think of a man who was forever harping on the injurious effects of chocolate creams, or nibbling between meals, or ice cream soda. Our own especial vices are the only ones that never need reforming.

There isn't much doubt that the great domestic problem is going to be solved when women make up their minds to let their husbands alone a little more—to take them as they are, faults and virtues included and indissolubly mixed.

The virtue of letting alone is equally applicable to children. What modern children suffer from is altogether too much attention. We are so afraid that they will hurt themselves that we keep them padded up in cotton wool as long as we can, and thus deprive them of the great lessons experience teaches, and, finally, when they will bear coddling and leading strings no longer, and they do make a break for liberty, we sit down and bemoan their lack of filial reverence and gratitude.

Our theory of doing the best we can for our children is always to be doing something. We never think that the very highest best—if one may use the phrase—is to let them alone, and let them find out for themselves what they are and what they want to be. It is a piece of monstrous vanity, anyway, to want one's children to be just like one's self.

The art of letting alone never seems so admirable and so unattainable as when we deplore its absence in our associates. Nothing else is so fatal a barrier to friendship. It is not possible to be on terms of any sort of intimacy with one woman in a hundred without her trying to more or less supervise your entire affairs. It isn't enough for a woman to be satisfied with her own superlative dressmaker and infallible doctor. She is miserable until she foists them on every one of her friends, and then, when she falls out with those paragons, she expects you to change with her. All sorts of reasons have been given for the scarcity of friendship between women. The real explanation is right here in a nutshell.

It sounds like a joke, but it's the sober truth that a woman has to reach the very highest pinnacle of unselfishness and generosity before she is willing to let others do their own way, and be happy after their own taste; instead of here, but how charming and delightful, how perfect and incomparable she is in every relation of life when she does master the art of letting others alone!
